Driver's licence $20 a year?

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Insurance Corp. of B.C. will ask the government to raise the cost of drivers' licences to $20 a year from the current fee of $5 every five years to help pay for its non-discrimination policy in the setting of premiums, the Vancouver Sun reports today.

The newspaper says the proposals are contained in a confidential summary of proposals by the Crown-owned insurer to make up the cost of the policy which will eliminate consideration of age, sex, marital status and place of residence in the setting of premiums.

Legislation instituting the policy was passed before the house adjourned Tuesday.

The Sun says other measures planned by ICBC include:

— Discontinuing the safe-driving discount now given to young motorists with good records;

— Ending the present safe-driving discount of up to 32.5 per cent for drivers without insurance claims, replacing it with a system under which drivers who have more than one accident a year would pay more than the base rate;

— Making people who have serious accidents — based on a dollar figure — pay higher premiums for three years;

— Imposing a general premium increase in Victoria, now the province's lowest-rated area.

ICBC president Robbie Sherrell has said that 80 per cent of the province's drivers will not pay more because of the non-discrimination policy, while refusing to divulge any specifics.

The Sun, however, notes that the plans called for in the summary mean that every B.C. driver would help pay the price through higher licensing fees.

The newspaper says ICBC will ask the government to impose the higher fees effective March 1, 1981, the date that age will not longer be a factor in calculating premium rates. Sex and marital status will be eliminated a year earlier, effective March 1, 1980.

The Sun notes that if carried out, the fee increase would raise $34 million a year for ICBC, based on the current average of 1.7 million drivers' licences now outstanding in the province.

Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy, who is the minister responsible for ICBC, said she would not comment on speculative newspaper stories.

Jane Bangay points to window where baby fell

After three-floor plunge . . . baby only winded

An 18-month-old boy escaped injury in a 35-foot fall from an apartment window in Victoria West Tuesday night.

Eric Hunter was only winded in the mishap that occurred at about 6:30 p.m. in front of a four-storey apartment at 310 Roberts. He was kept in Victoria General Hospital overnight for observation but was expected to be released later today.

The boy's mother, Carol Hunter, 28, was working in the kitchen of her third-floor suite when she got a telephone call from a resident in the block.

"Hey, your little kid just fell out a window," Mrs. Hunter quoted the caller as saying.

She said the boy had gone into a bedroom where she thought he was playing with the family's cats.

He apparently climbed on to a laundry hamper near a window, climbed out to the sill and slipped.

Jack and Vivian Bangay, who live in an apartment one floor below, were on their balcony when they saw the fall. The boy landed on the grass, belly-first.

The Bangay's 15-year-old daughter, Jane, leaped from the family's second-floor balcony to the ground 15 feet below, picked up the unconscious boy and starting pumping him on the back in an attempt to revive him.

Jane's father applied mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

"All of a sudden he opened his eyes and looked at us sort of wild-like," Jane said. "Then he began to cry."

Mrs. Hunter said Eric had just started to crawl and climb.

"He knows up and out," she said, "but that's the first down he's experienced.

"I think he's going to live a long life. He'll live until he's an old, old man."

AirCan cuts fares for fall

TORONTO (UPC) — Passengers flying to destinations in excess of 1,600 kilometres on Air Canada this fall will enjoy fare reductions ranging from 48 to 68 per cent.

The fare cut, which first must be approved by the government, is similar to the airline's successful spring program and will operate between Sept. 24 and Nov. 23 to destinations within Canada and the United States.

The airline hopes to to announce fare reductions for short-haul trips at a later date.

CP Air is studying the Air Canada package and will have an announcement soon, possibly by Thursday, a spokesman for that airline said.

To qualify for the low-cost tickets, passengers will have to: book 30 days in advance; stay a minimum of seven days; purchase tickets no later than seven days after reservations are made, except for those made between Aug. 1-24, which must be purchased by Aug. 31; complete return travel no no later than 30 days after the outward journey.

Passengers already holding charter class seats for the period of the sale will be allowed to purchase tickets at sale price upon payment of a $20 fee.

Row over Rhodesia erupts at conference

Times News Services

LUSAKA — Britain today told the opening session of the Commonwealth conference summit it is seeking "genuine" black majority rule in Zimbabwe-Rhodesia, but Australia and Zambia warned that the current solution of a basically-black legislature would never find acceptance.

"We still have white power clothed in black," Zambian leader Kenneth Kaunda said and warned that in the end "Africa will win the war" against Bishop Abel Muzorewa, black prime minister of Zimbabwe Rhodesia.

The clash came as Nigeria nationalized the British share in a jointly-operated oil company in what appears to be the start of a major drive to force Britain to change its policy on Zimbabwe-Rhodesia.

The British delegation to the Lusaka conference, headed by new Conservative Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, called the Nigerian action an "extraordinary move."

A delegation spokesman rejected what it said was a Nigerian explanation linking the move to the sale of British oil to South Africa.

"Taking into account the timing of this extraordinary move on the eve of the Commonwealth meeting, the British government can suppose only that the real reason for the Nigerian action is something entirely different," he said.

The takeover involves the 20 per cent share of British Petroleum in the combined Nigerian-Royal Dutch Shell-BP oil company. Nigeria already owned 60 per cent of the company, with Shell and BP evenly sharing the remainder.

Nigeria has threatened Britain and the United States with economic retaliation if they lift sanctions against the Muzorewa government.

Nigeria is the second largest exporter of oil to the United States and has surpassed South Africa as Britain's largest trading partner.

With its oil wealth and burgeoning economy, Nigeria is regarded as the major — and perhaps only — African weapon in attempting to prevent the West from accepting Zimbabwe-Rhodesia government, which guarantees the 250,000 whites a privileged role in the population of 7 million.

It appered that Nigeria may have begun a broad attack on the British economy. The pound dropped six cents to $2.25 (U.S.) on European exchange markets overnight and some dealers blamed Nigeria, saying it was offering to sell upward of 500 million pounds.

Sterling, however, rebounded to $2.27 U.S. by noon today.

The Nigerian announcement said BP had been told that it would be compensated, but there was no immediate indication of the amount.

Even though Tuesday's Nigerian actions were limited to Britain, the fallout could have an impact in the U.S. where Congress has been pressuring President Jimmy Carter to lift sanctions against Zimbabwe-Rhodesia, a move than could conceivably lead to similar Nigerian action against the United States.

1,000 suites blaze

HOUSTON (AP) — Fire swept through a huge, wood-shingled apartment complex Tuesday, destroying hundreds of fashionable apartments and leaving residents stunned and homeless.

Houston Fire Chief V. E. Rogers described it as the worst blaze in his 24 years on the force.

At the height of the fire more than 35 buildings were in flames but no one was killed, authorities said.

As many as 1,000 of the 1,100 apartments were destroyed. Officials estimate that up to 1,500 persons are homeless.

As darkness fell, some victims of the fire arranged salvaged items of furniture on a tennis court to provide beds for the night.

Arson is suspected, officials say. "We're questioning a couple of people right now," a spokesman said.

Dairy products to rise

OTTAWA (CP) — Butter, cheese, ice cream and skim milk powder prices will start going up next week, the result of increased returns to dairy farmers announced today by Agriculture Minister John Wise.

Butter will cost at least five cents a pound more and skim milk powder will increase at least two cents a pound, officials said. They could not say how great increases in cheese prices will be but they will come into effect gradually.

Table milk prices are not affected by the increase.

The announcement came at the start of so-called dairy year, a 12-month period for which a national production level is set for industrial or manufacturing milk used to make dairy products.

Wise also announced that each province is being allowed an additional three-per-cent quota for industrial milk for the production of evaporated milk, whole milk and cheese for export.

MLAs hustle pay hike as dull session closes

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

The B.C. legislature prorogued with a bang Tuesday but not before whimpering along for most of the two-month session that was noted more for its desultory debate than for significant legislation.

The bang came when members looked at the clock, saw it was close to the normal 6 p.m. adjournment time and took an almost indecently short 12 minutes to vote themselves a 31 per cent pay raise.

There was no debate and not a whisper of constraint from a single MLA in the 57-member house over the raise that will cost taxpayers about half a million dollars annually.

Although debate in the last few days picked up noticably, most members left for their abbreviated summer vacation wondering why the business took so long to wrap up.

Both the throne speech and the $4.56 billion budget were recycled versions of the attempt earlier in the spring to hold a legislative session — one that lasted nine days before the election call.

When the new session began June 6, the Socred ranks were reduced to 31. They faced a rejuvenated NDP bench of 26 members.

At the end, Premier Bill Bennett said the session accomplished his aim of further shifting taxation off the people and industry and getting more from resources.

Opposition leader Dave Barrett said the government has done nothing to stimulate employment, alleviate unemployment or increase financing for hospitals.

In its 38 sitting days, the legislature approved 34 government bills and two rarely accepted private member's bills.

Much of the new legislation simply implemented proposals in the budget and enacted at least some of the Socred promises made during the May 10 election campaign.

Many others were housekeeping matters, updating or removing old statutes, some of which had been on the books since Queen Victoria's time.

Among the half dozen or so significant new bills are:

— Amendments to the B.C. Resources Investment Act which allowed the free share giveaway and additional sale of shares in the Crown corporation with major holdings in the province.

— Amendments to the Constitution Act giving MLAs their first pay boost in seven years, raising salaries to $21,000 per year and tax free expense allowances to $10,500 among other benefits including indexed raises in the future.

— An act ending age, sex, marital status and geographic location in setting auto insurance rates.

— The contentious bill the NDP claim will be the sleeper of the session that establishes a super-society to de-

Worms force Safeway fish return

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Safeway stores in Victoria have shipped all their fresh fish stocks back to the packing house for re-examination after a shopper found three live worms in a package of cod fillets.

District manager Jack Fidler said today he has asked the packing houses to do a better job handling the fish to ensure all parasitic worms are removed before the fish hits the shelves.

He described it as a rare incident.

He said it is almost impossible to detect worms because when the fish is brought in it is in ice packs and the worms only start moving when the shipment thaws.

The federal consumer and corporate affairs ministry also is looking into the situation.

But that's of little solace to Jaro Svitorka of 2100 Richmond. As far as he is concerned, if he never sees another fish again it will be too soon.

Svitorka said he bought a package of cod fillets at the Safeway store at Foul Bay Road and Fort Street on Friday. But when his wife opened the package she looked in horror as she saw strange translucent worms wiggling on the fish's flesh.

Svitorka said he counted three of the creatures, each about two inches long, before he and his wife decided to close the package and think of something else for dinner.

"It was really unpleasant. It's put us off from eating fish ever again."

However, Wayne Holmes, supervisor of federal fisheries inspection on Vancouver Island, said today there is no cause for alarm.

"Worms in fish are a natural occurrence," he said. "Persons should expect that in some products worms are going to be there."

He said his inspection staff monitors the fish packing plants and if more than four worms are found in 15 pounds of fish then the packing plant is supposed to candle the fish — passing it over a light — and extract the nematodes with knives.

"Unfortunately he can't always be there. A lot of product goes through that we never see."

He said the worms pose no health hazard provided the fish is frozen solid or cooked.

He said the worms, called nematodes by scientists, are particularly common in cod, but practically all marine fishes which form a part of the diet of fish-eating mammals are infected.

He said the worms the Svitorkas saw were likely only an intermediary life-form in the development of the nematode which normally reaches its adult stage in mammals.

Fortunately man is not a usual host and is seldom affected if one of the worms is swallowed.

He even suggested cooked worms may be beneficial because they contain more protein than the fish.

One simple hope kept Debbie alive

GIBBONS, Alta. (CP) — One simple hope kept Debbie Mitchell alive while she wandered for a week, lost in the mosquito-infested swamps and bush of northern Alberta.

"I just wanted to go home," the 22-year-old Edmonton woman said while recovering at her parents' home in Gibbons, near Edmonton.

"Lots of times I didn't know what I was doing," said Debbie, relating how she came to believe at times that mosquitoes were talking to her.

"There was only one time when I thought I might die, but I still knew I had to keep going."

An RCMP helicopter crew found her Saturday, frantically waving as she stood waist-deep in a swamp.

Debbie, an office worker for an Edmonton construction firm, was only 360 metres from her campsite.

Her memory still hazy and feet and legs swollen and scarred, Debbie said the ordeal started when she left her three companions to go for a walk.

As night fell, it started raining heavily and she became lost trying to return to the campsite.

"It got darker and darker and I started running and running.

"I had the feeling somebody was after me."

"My feet were really getting cut up, I guess, but after a while I lost any sensation in them. I didn't stop and look too closely."

At night, she sometimes found a swamp where she could lie in the warm water, avoiding the night chill and the insects.

As exhaustion overcame her, Debbie began hallucinating. Her thinking became distorted and she imagined insects were talking to her..

Hunger was never a problem, she said. "I just ate berries wherever I found them."

At first, Debbie was hesitant to drink the foul-smelling swamp water, but, "I was just so dry I had to drink it."

"Now I like it," she said, laughing. "I think I'd always like it."

By Friday night, she was bruised and numb and stopped walking.

velop and operate the $100 million new ski area at Whistler.

— A bill setting up a provincial refugee advisory board to administer a program of aiding refugees in their resettlement in B.C.

Debate on only two bills generated the kind of fiery debate most people have come to expect of the B.C. legislature — the Whistler bill and a private members bill giving Trinity Western religious college degree granting university status. (See story on page 10.)

The opposition charged the Whistler bill is a pay-off for Social Credit supporters and that with cabinet approval it could give the friends control through a weighted vote contrary to the democratic principle of one person, one vote.

The new session gave both sides of the house an opportunity to feel out the new members in their ranks, and gave Bennett especially a chance to look at the raw material in his backbenches as he contemplates a promised cabinet shuffle this fall.

That shuffle has given rise to much speculation, but the premier must be a bit disappointed generally in the performances he received from his new backbenchers.

His brightest prospect by far is Peter Hyndman, the witty lawyer from Vancouver South.

But geography is working against both the premier and Hyndman and a possible cabinet post.

The cabinet is overflowing with Lower Mainland ministers and Bennett will be forced to reach out into the Interior and perhaps to the Island to balance cabinet representation.

Both sides of the house expected more from Oak Bay's Brian Smith.

An accomplished lawyer with extensive administrative experience as Oak Bay mayor, observers were surprised his two most noticeable efforts in the house were to complain about the slippery floors in his maiden speech and then to introduce a member's bill complaining about Canada's conversion to the metric system of weights and measures.

Smith did, however, get through a housekeeping bill expanding the University of Victoria Foundation to generate more money.

But the new Socred backbenchers are on the whole a vast improvement over their predecessors.

Jack Kempf (Omineca) has moved into the front row and has greatly reduced the sniping the KKKs (Kempf, George Kerster and Lyle Kahl) practised last session.

On the NDP side, the return of Ernie Hall (Surrey) and Jim Lorimer (Burnaby-Willingdon) have helped improve debate.

But their bright spot is Stu Leggatt (Coquitlam-Moody), the accomplished debater with federal experience.

The hands-in-pockets studiously casual Robert Redford of the legislature, Gordon Hanson (Victoria) makes his speeches refreshingly brief, but still has to prove he has more to offer the legislature than Sam Bawlf whom he defeated.

5 charged in lottery scheme

TORONTO (CP) — Five persons have been charged with conspiracy to commit fraud in a lottery ticket scheme.

Two women and three men have been charged in the scheme that turned unnumbered Provincial lottery tickets into instant winners, police said. The counterfeit tickets won $60,000.

Police said valid tickets were intercepted somewhere between the printing plant in Ottawa and a Toronto firm hired to print numbers on each ticket.

Numbers were printed on the tickets after the draw and cashed in banks in amounts of up to $1,000, "a sure way of being a prizewinner," said police.

John Edward Woods, 42, owner a firm selling land-surveying instruments, was charged with conspiracy to steal $75,000 in surveying equipment, possession of stolen goods, and forgery.

Four others were charged with conspiracy to commit fraud.

Atkey blasted over Chilean

OTTAWA (CP) — Immigration Minister Ron Atkey is hiding behind technicalities and spouting factual inaccuracies in trying to defend his refusal to grant a Chilean seaman refugee status in Canada, a New Democratic MP, said today.

Svend Robinson, who represents the British Columbia riding of Burnaby, also accused Atkey of applying a double standard by welcoming 50,000 boat people fleeing Communist rule in southeast Asia while refusing to grant Galindo Madrid-Avilez refugee status from the military dictatorship in Chile.

Atkey said Tuesday that there is nothing he can do to help Madrid-Avilez because the Immigration Act prohibits him from issuing a minister's permit for residence in Canada to anyone already deported.

Canada continues to harbor under a minister's permit Gen. Quang, a South Vietnamese general who ran a multi-million dollar criminal ring involved in narcotics trafficking during the civil war in that country.

Madrid-Avilez jumped ship in Squamish in March, 1977, and was ordered deported in October of that year. His appeals for refugee status, supported by church groups and some MPs, have been turned down by seven tribunals, including the refugee status advisory committee and the Federal Court of Canada.

Kidnapped Dalila to marry Algerian

According to a Paris announcement today, Dalila Maschino, spirited away from her French-born Christian husband in Montreal in April, 1978, by her wealthy brother, will be married to an Algerian. A group calling itself the Algerian Movement for Peace and Liberty said the woman's brother, Messaoud Zeghar, would announce the news on television in Los Angeles. Details of the remarriage announcement were not immediately available. A spokesman for the Algerian movement said only that the remarriage would "be the end of the affair."

The man known as "Father of the H-Bomb," Dr. Edward Teller, has blamed Jane Fonda, Ralph Nader "and their kind" for causing him to suffer a heart attack May 8, from which he is now recovering. In fact, he maintains he has become the only person whose health was affected, in an indirect way at that, by the nuclear incident at Three Mile Island near Harrisburg in March. After the incident, he said, he went to Washington to "refute the propaganda" being spewed to the news media by those who want "to frighten people away from nuclear power." To prepare his testimony for a May 7 appearance, Teller said, he had to work 20 hours a day, a strain that proved too much for him at age 71.

Farrah . . . a beauty tip

In Chicago Tuesday was Farrah Fawcett-Majors — who may soon be just plain ol' Farah Fawcett now that she's splitting with Lee Majors — with a beauty tip, which she could sell if she wanted to. Asked how she regulates her diet, Farrah said, "I listen to my body. So I find if I just want salad, that's what I eat." And for fun eating? "When I'm filming I'm very disciplined about what I eat, but on weekends I eat whatever I want — Baby Ruths, Snickers or whatever."

The Osmond family is growing. The wife of Donny Osmond gave birth to a 7-pound, 7-ounce boy — their first — at Utah Valley Hospital in Provo Tuesday, and the new addition — the 20th offspring in the Osmond singing group — will be named Donald Clark Osmond Jr. If you think it was tough on Mom and Junior, though, forget it. The hospital says they're doing fine. But it was hard cheese on Donny, he called it "the longest night of my life."

Osmonds . . . singing son

The exiled Shah of Iran, may wish he were back in Tehran, but finds himself "very happy" in Mexico anyway. The shah, in an interview aired Tuesday on Mexico City's government-run television station, said he and his wife, Empress Farah, decided to live in Mexico because they had visited the country before and "we took back such wonderful memories . . . We have been very happy since we came here."

And finally, the 17-year-old Australian who won $10,000 and a free trip to the United States after finding remnants of Skylab in his backyard says he is bored and ready to go home. Stanley Thornton said Tuesday in Cape Canaveral, Fla., that he was never interested in space and only read about Skylab a week before it fell to earth on July 11. But Thornton says the U.S. is too big, that he dislikes the fanfare and is ready to go home to Esperance in western Australia.

17 die, 30 escape as plane falls in sea

LERWICK, Shetland Islands (AP) — Seventeen persons were killed Tuesday when a British charter plane carrying North Sea oil workers crashed into the sea as it was taking off from Mainland Island in the Shetlands north of Scotland.

Thirty other passengers on the Hawker Siddeley 748 operated by Dan-Air Services, escaped through emergency exits.

Survivors said the plane filled quickly with icy water. Some swam for shore, others were picked up by helicopter or small boat.

"I was five feet from the back of the plane," one man told reporters. "Water was pouring in from the front. I tried to get out of the rear, then I went back for my lifejacket. I had to jump over the seats and the water was up to our necks. I just seemed to grab hold of the person in front and get dragged to the door."

The twin-turboprop aircraft was chartered by Shell Oil Co. and was taking off from Mainland's Sumburgh Airport, near Lerwick, with 44 oil workers bound for leave in Aberdeen, Scotland, and a crew of three.

Witnesses said the plane took off in heavy rain and crashed into the sea only 50 metres from the end of the runway.

"One minute it was going along the runway, the next it was in the sea with only the tail visible," one said.

Jonathan Dalrymple-Smith, a pilot who ran to the shore to help survivors, said: "I saw one person clinging to the tail and three others on the starboard wing. A lot of people were swimming toward the shore."

"It was absolute chaos," said James Buchan, an oil worker who was in the airport lounge. "The first we knew of the crash was when these people, half dead and chattering with cold, began to come into the lounge."

The only woman on board, a stewardess, survived. None of the survivors was seriously injured, but eight were detained overnight in hospital at Lerwick. Most were suffering from shock and from swallowing oily water.

Gas hounds watch pumps for stickers

SEATTLE (AP) — Federal officials say they will vigorously enforce new gasoline regulations which take effect today requiring service station to post maximum prices.

The rules require that the maximum price a gallon a dealer may charge and a maximum allowable profit of 15.4 cents a gallon must be posted on gas pumps or in the station window.

Energy officials expect average gasoline prices will not be affected very much by the regulations.

"We'll probably start doing sweeps (inspections)," said Tom Kiste, supervisory auditor for the department of energy's regional office in Seattle.

"Probably in the next three to four weeks, we'll be hitting them pretty hard."

Kiste said the Seattle regional office has hired five new inspectors and plans to hire more but declined to reveal the size of the total inspection force for the area.

Maximum price stickers were required under old energy department regulations, but very few dealers were charged with violations.

Kiste said the new 15.4-cent profit rule will be easier to enforce because virtually all dealers must operate under the same simple price formula.

Dealers who violate the new rule can be required to roll their prices back a nickel a gallon for 30 days.

Pots and kettles

The only question to be asked about the patronage row in the B.C. legislature on Monday is why on earth everybody got so excited about it.

Patronage and political debates about it are perennial topics on the B.C. legislative scene. It's amazing any MLA would push the matter to the point of getting himself expelled from the House. The general rule is that such extreme measures are taken only in the case of a really important confrontation.

The row began when NDP leader Dave Barrett called Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy the "patron of patronage." Mrs. McCarthy objected, saying such an accusation is unparliamentary. Barrett, however, refused to withdraw the charge, claiming it was true. Eventually he was thrown out of the House.

Barrett's charge is based on the fact that McCarthy has been instrumental in the making of many appointments of prominent Social Crediters to government jobs. He notes, as just two examples, that McCarthy's former campaign manager, John Plul, received a top job in the tourism ministry after the election of the government, and that Dianne Hartwick, a former candidate for party president, ended up with a job in McCarthy's office.

That is all true. Whether that makes McCarthy the "patron of patronage" or merely a minister on a constant search for qualified candidates for government positions depends, presumably, on one's political outlook.

It certainly does not make McCarthy unique. Most cabinet ministers have found Social Credit members or supporters to take jobs on the boards of Crown corporations, as political assistants and on contract as researchers on important policy questions.

Moreover, and more to the political point, the NDP led by Barrett himself did exactly the same thing for the 39 months it was in government. It's certainly difficult to remember a single well-known private enterpriser who got a major appointment from Barrett.

It's remarkably easy, on the other hand, to think of a former NDP member and roommate of Barrett's who was appointed to head the B.C. Petroleum Corp., a retired cabinet minister who was appointed to head B.C. House in London, and a planning confrere of then-resources minister Bob Williams who got a job on the land commission.

In a perfect society, patronage would doubtless be abolished. Every vacancy, even those not chosen through the impartial public service commission, would be filled on merit.

Regrettably, however, no jurisdiction in Canada is perfect, and many would argue that B.C. is farther from perfection than most.

That being the case, the pot should not get into the childish game of calling the kettle black.

Changes have been made

People in Victoria periodically complain about how slow the planners and politicians are in rejuvenating the Inner Harbor. It's a project with perennial planning sessions. How many years ago was the Reid site frozen and purchased by the province, with several enticing plans mooted for the property, only to be paved over as a parking lot?

How many studies and consultant's reports have been commissioned? Memory fails to supply answers as one dredges the dim past. A superficial onceover suggests it has been all talk and no action, but during the last decade there have been improvements and beneficial changes.

Sometimes it takes an outsider to show us just how far Victoria has come. Compare the progress in rehabilitating the Inner Harbor with, say, the continuing stagnation on Vancouver's waterfront. Victoria's is a showplace.

Victorians can get down to their harbor. It is an open, attractive place to walk, sit, watch and idle away an hour or a day — from the Johnson Street bridge south, right around past Laurel Point and Fisherman's Wharf.

Our harbor is not the throbbing centre of commerce it was decades ago, but neither is it a phoney tourist attraction like San Francisco's. Real fishboats tie up, ferries disembark hundreds of passengers every day, float planes land and take off, tugs and barges move in and out, the bridge goes up and down. The whole panorama happens before the eyes of any who care to watch.

Contrast that with Vancouver. The working harbor there is off-limits. There might as well be a Berlin Wall along the city's waterfront. In one of the busiest ports in the world, most Vancouverites are oblivious to what provides many citizens with jobs and wages.

Victoria may have lost its position as the province's pre-eminent city around the turn of the century, but we can still teach Vancouver a thing or two.

MICHAEL KERNAN

The Times takes a ribbing

WASHINGTON — It seems to be The Times of London, and the biggest headline thunders: GOVERNMENT TO ABOLISH INCOME TAX.

The lead: "Mrs. Thatcher last night announced that Mr. Kerry Packer, the Australian businessman, is to be granted exclusive rights to the televising of Parliament and control of all future television channels in return for a sum thought to be around £2 billion a year. The prime minister pledged that the revenue would enable the government to abolish income tax."

The eye drifts to other startling headlines: New Doubt Over Succession to Throne. Grand Canal to Become Motorway. Curates' Union Threatens to Black the Host.

About this time the eye drifts to the logo and notes that, though the newspaper resembles The Times of London in every detail, it is called Not (Yet) The Times.

Probably it was inevitable. When The New York Times ceased publication for three months in 1978 because of a strike, some staffers put out a parody issue of 24 pages last Oct. 16.

The Times of London and The Sunday Times have been shut down since last Nov. 30, also because of labor troubles.

No divorce plans

It was an American writer living in London, one Cindy Blake, who first got the idea when she spotted Not The New York Times on a visit home. She contacted John Graham, former Washington correspondent for The Observer, and some veterans of The Sunday Times, notably George Darby, Phillip Knightley and designer Victor Clark. They set to work.

Co-conspirator David Thomas, whose father is a high official at the British embassy in Washington, said that though no one has so far engaged to distribute the paper in Washington, it can be ordered by mail for £1 from Stopesholl Ltd., 24 Petersham Place, London SW7.

In 16 pages of small type, Not The Times digs out an incredible amount of news.

Buckingham Palace denies reports of impending divorce between the queen and the Duke of Edinburgh. Pakistan has developed a neutron bomb. The Bank of England is to be sold at auction. And at Old Trafford there is the excitement over a cricket match in which two Sri Lankan athletes and "a number of spectators" were killed.

"Yesterday's tragic incident at Old Trafford," booms the editorial; "draws attention once again to the need for a clearer definition of the run-out rule . . ."

The court circular — the daily column which makes The Times unique and endears it to American visitors — leads off: "Buckingham Palace — The Queen had a boiled egg for breakfast and read the morning papers. Air Commodore Ashbrooke Pemberton-ffrench was in attendence."

It goes on to list those who attended a gala dinner, including not only Jane Austen, Francis Bacon and the unknown author of Ecclesiastes, but the names of the perpetrators of Not The Times.

Jane Austen, by the way, turns up under marriages, where the opening sentence of Pride and Prejudice appear in snippets.

An obituary: "Brig. Hubert Sinclair Muirfield, CB, CBE MC, who served in both wars in the Northern Rhodesia Flying Corps and latterly served on the Wet Fish Authority in Scunthrope, has died at the age of 93. He leaves a grandmother and three curly-haired retrievers."

The infection has spread to the pictures, too. What purports to be "Welsh and French members of the newly elected European Parliament" is actually an old photo of Lloyd George and Clemenceau in the First World War.

Somewhat more barbed is the picture that goes with an article on the auction of a rare "Amati fiddle." "Amati," one recalls, is not only the name of a great violin-maker but also Italian for "lovers." In the photo, the man holding the priceless instrument has an eerie resemblance to Jeremy Thorpe. (It is, in truth, Thorpe, and how he got to be photographed in evening dress holding a violin is too tiresome to relate). "Fiddle" is British slang for a connivance.

Editor Graham said the issue is such a success that the first run of 200,000 copies is nearly sold out and a second run of 100,000 has been ordered. There may be a third.

"This will top the record for parody publications," he said from London. "It will be the target for future parodies. We've been getting telex orders from Hong Kong and Australia . . . and it's all because we have such brilliant writers, including Peter Jay (former British ambassador to the United States, who wrote the lead editorial), Marina Warner (novelist), William Shawcross and Christopher Book, the first editor of Private Eye and the most brilliant parodist in England."

The further one delves into this newspaper, the more one appreciates how thoroughly the job was done. Even the ads aren't sacred (how about the Micro-Dot Fly Mail Services, or a new anti-perspirant, Acquittal, for Men in the Dock?), even the letters, even the bridge column and the TV schedule. Even, can one bear it, the Staid University news, which here intones:

Not on strike

"Emmanuel Hall. Mr. U. H. Holloranski, D. Sc., university lecturer-elect in Old Norse, has been given the old heave ho."

References to America abound, from word of a secret pact to make the U.K. the 51st state to a sly mention of "Rehoboth, Md." Perhaps the best laugh for those who have visited Britain recently is this leader:

"Holiday chaos struck at Britain's major airports yesterday, bringing Heathrow, not to mention Gatwick, Manchester and even Aberdeen airports to a grinding halt.

"The main reason for this was the unprecedented decision by deputy air traffic controllers in Barcelona, Paris and London not to go on strike or even so much as work-to-rule over the Bank Holiday weekend."

"... wow, look what arrived today ... Sohrbach's Mark IV, the best from Switzerland, fibreglass over spring steel, controlled contour-stress and the new swivel-release flexifold handgrip — feel the difference ..."

We need Erickson

In response to the article Can We Afford Such Splendor? by Douglas Fisher in the Times July 25 I would like to make the following impassioned reply:

Architects paint the backdrop to society. Today's architects are engaged, not only in the challenging historic task of creating the buildings that communities require, but in participating broadly in the concerns and affairs of society.

Good buildings of the past are our heritage, they enrich our towns and cities, they add variety to the urban scene and remind us of the continuity of our human environment, linking the past and the present and pointing towards the future. Renewed interest in preservation and restoration of old and historice buildings is a sign of our times.

Increasingly, evidence of such interest and effort towards understanding, respecting and preserving our architectural heritage is to be found in all Canadian cities and towns from coast to coast.

Architecture has always expressed the dominant theme of its time. It has frequently been a flattering or embarrassing mirror, reflecting the values of its age, and the present times are no exception — Toronto city hall; Scarborough civic centre; the courthouse complex in Vancouver; the Inner Harbor improvements, flanked by Rattenbury's Empress Hotel and Parliament Buildings, Bastion Square and Market Square, the latter three all in Victoria — are all examples of those expressions. In addition there are numerous contemporary examples of places of worship, government buildings and buildings for our educational and cultural institutions right here in this city.

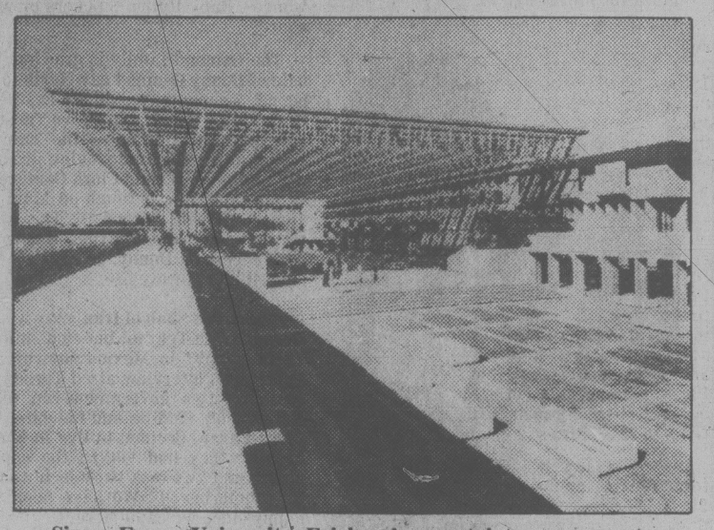

The nature of modern commerce, finance, business and government operating within a complex urban society has generated the need for larger and more complex buildings. Large buildings frequently present special problems in such civic areas as traffic congestion, provision of water, sewer, and fire fighting services, parking and interference with the rights, hopes and aspirations of owners and occupiers of adjacent buildings.

The design of these buildings and their integration in the city demands a high degree of understanding and competence. The technical problems of structure, climate control, energy conservation, circulation, functional planning and space efficiency together with the aesthetic concerns posed by these new developments requires special design skills. If present trends continue, 80 per cent of all Canadians will be urban dwellers. The problems and the potential, therefore, will be, and is, evident in our cities.

These matters have to do largely with social and economic matters. Architects, on the other hand, have largely to do with physical matters — buildings and spaces. Many architects are involved in urban design, giving physical expression to the social, economic and environmental determinants of the city. Some serve on planning boards, design panels and assist in residents' associations. Professional associations of architects have set up committees available to the community. Sometimes architects are involved in design projects of civic significance — restoration areas, shopping centres, housing developments, and industrial estates. Every individual building influences urban design quality in terms of functional visual relationships to its surroundings.

The scope of architecture extends in one direction to the total community or region, in the other to interior design and to the details of furniture and fitments.

Architecture is the art, science and business of buildings and space. Can we ignore our responsibilities to produce beautiful buildings for future generations? Can we ignore our social conscience? Can we not afford "the genius of an Erickson" and other architects who struggle to provide the stage sets against which we continue to carry out the drama of life itself? — Terence J. Williams, Chairman, Vancouver Island Chapter of Architects.

Simon Fraser University, Erickson's mountaintop monument.

Royal Oak roads

The highways ministry should stick firmly to its stand on the Royal Oak industrial zone proposal and should resist every political pressure from the municipality and the developers.

In a letter to Saanich dated Jan. 31, 1977, Highways Minister Alex Fraser listed some conditions which had to be met by the municipality before the highways ministry would approve the industrial zone proposal.

The conditions were: "(a) Glanford is four-laned from McKenzie to Quadra and (b) Rte. 17/Vanalman/Douglas is closed and (c) Rte. 17/Quadra interchange is converted to a diamond or (d) Part interchange (northbound off, southbound on) is constructed on Rte. 17 at Vanalman and a connection opened to Quadra."

In October 1977, Saanich rejected, in effect, condition (d) with its approval of the North Quadra residential development.

Conditions (a) and (b) were also rejected when in May, council voted against widening Glanford Avenue and also turfed out the proposal of an east-west road from the intersection of Vanalman/Route 17 to connect with Carey and Roy Roads.

In his letter, Mr. Fraser argued that the role of Route 17 "as an interregional trunk highway, with Gulf of Georgia crossing and as a regional highway serving the Victoria-Saanich peninsula area is most important, particularly since no reasonable and socially acceptable alternates are available."

Four years ago, again in correspondence with the municipality, the ministry stated: "The role of the highway (Route 17) is to carry interregional traffic — not to be exploited for local access trips" and "the total proposal (for an industrial development) is not acceptable because of its adverse impact on the highway."

The ministry also stated it would agree to something smaller if Glanford was widened and "subsequent approval would be contingent on developers or the municipality contributing significantly to revisions of the Rte. 17/Vanalman intersection and the Rte. 17/Quadra interchange."

With council's decision on Glanford and the east-west road, the highways ministry should now veto the industrial zone proposal and kill the project once and for all. — Ben J. Pires, 804 Mann Avenue.

It's gone

Your edition of July 26 contained some interesting architectural references. In the Walk of The Week feature a photograph of a building cornice appeared and was identified as part of Old Town. Good luck to those strollers who go out looking for it. The building in question was the terra cotta Jones Building, designed by Sam McLure, that once stood on the site of the new Royal bank at Fort and Douglas. Strollers would have to look pretty hard to find any sort of interesting decorative detail on it. Incidentally, the lady medallions still exist. There were two on the Jones Building and they are now the focal points of two city gardens.

In reference to the painted murals that once graced the interior of the Royal, there is still some question as to whether they were removed or simply painted or papered over.

The fabulous stained glass dome featured on the second front page must have made them wince down at the Empress. A similar dome was once the pride of the Palm Court Lounge (the antechamber to the ballroom). Through accident, indifference, or the whims of an interior decorator, depending on which story you hear, it was destroyed in the 1960s. Reconstruction of an identical dome would do wonders for both the room and Empress PR. — Thomas R. Palfrey, 941 Meares Street.

The Senate 'time bomb'

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — In his recent conference Mr. Trudeau was cagey about the Senate. When a reporter wondered whether he had "no intention to make use of your party majority there," whether "regardless of the legislation which went through, you would tell the senators to vote by their own conscience . . . say on a bill to dismantle Petrocan," the Liberal leader said his MPs would vote against a bill to dismantle Petrocan. "If it passes the House and goes to the Senate I can't honestly promise what vote I could deliver there."

Then he was very careful, very protective. "I would certainly want to have a consultation with the Senate and discuss with them. I think the senators themselves, quite frankly, probably wouldn't want to defeat the government on a major bill and I am not speaking on behalf of the Senate Liberals or Tories or anyone else. I don't think they would like to see a campaign in which the government party went to the people on the issue that the Senate had blocked the will of the people, of the elected representatives of the people, but I'm in the area of speculation . . ."

Their control of the Senate is a tantalizing opportunity to the Liberals. It is also, as Trudeau made clear, a bomb that could blow the Liberals out of the electoral water, if the fuse is set recklessly or too soon.

Some 50 present senators are Liberals, appointed by Mr. Trudeau. Another score are Pearson appointments. Another ten go back to the St. Laurent-King days. Even though Joe Clark will be able to appoint about half-a-dozen new senators, the voting balance in the Senate in this new Parliament and session will be somewhere between 74-80 Grits to 22-28 Tories.

It's so simple it was often forgotten in long years of Liberal domination that anything to become law must be passed by the Senate. Even more, even if it has to be done carefully with the Tories in power, anything the Liberal senators want to undertake as an inquiry or even for debate is in their hands. Remember what they did in the Coyne affair back in the Diefenbaker days? They gave the then-head of the Bank of Canada his day "in court" before them, even though such was anathema to the Tories, who only controlled the House.

Everybody in politics knows of inadequacies of the Senate which are built in by the constitution. Its geographic representation is unfair; its enormous tilt to the party of the past, rather than the parties of the present, is inordinate; most of all it retains enormous killing and delaying powers even if these have largely fallen into disuse.

The representation of the House has shifted westward. Now 77 of the 282 House seats are in the four Western provinces. But only 24 of the 104 Senate seats. Of the 24, only two incumbents are Tories, Duff Roblin and Paul Yuzyk. The Liberals have only two western MPs in this Parliament whereas, ironically, they have four western senators.

The Senate in the new Parliament has an unpredictable feature unheard of in modern times. It will have at least three and probably four ministers of the Crown in it. Two of them, Bob de Cotret and Jacques Flynn, hold very important portfolios — justice, and industry, trade and commerce. The Senate does have a daily oral question period. These ministers will draw questions. Their entries into Senate debates will be politically significant in a way unknown before. The temptation of the Liberals will be to thrust at these ministers. At the same time, in the House, the Liberals will be raising hell because of their inadequate opportunities to query the responsibilities of these miniistes "in the other place."

The prime minister knows that in the short-run of two or three years he can do almost nothing about rectifying the partisan and geographic imbalance of the Senate. Just as Mr. Trudeau apprehends, Mr. Clark would love a chance to go to the people on the theme of being blocked by the partisan detritus of the past. This is the unfused bomb. Yet the Senate is a living institution, filled with politicians, most of them dedicated not just to their own survival as senators, but to the restoration of the Liberal Party to power.

For the first few months of the new Parliament matters in the Senate are likely to be sweet and comely and almost unobtrusive. But the temptation, the power and the partisan grist are there in the mill. Once the first piece of legislation lands in the mill that has been fought in the House by the Liberal MPs, watch out. The Liberal senators are participants in the Trudeau caucus.

'Dowry murders' spread

By TYLER MARSHALL

India's middle class affluence fuels serious social problem

NEW DELHI — Police know that Kanchan Mala Hardy was burned to death. But they probably will never know if the 19-year-old newlywed killed herself or if she was killed by her in-laws, the latest entry on a growing list of women victimized by dowry disputes.

It is believed Mrs. Hardy died because her father, who earns $75 a month as a school principal, was unable to come up with an additional $2,500 cash, a refrigerator and a television set demanded by her in-laws as part of the marriage bargain. He had already given $5,000 in cash, clothes, jewelry and household furnishings.

It wasn't enough, and after months of torment from her new in-laws, she died of burns in what was officially described as a cooking accident. Her parents say she was killed; her in-laws say she committed suicide.

The dowry has become a serious social problem for middle-class India. Prolonged disputes over dowries are now considered a major cause of marriage breakdown.

The gift-giving begins at the first meeting of the couple (usually in the parents' company) and is expected never to stop. In addition to substantial gifts at each of the numerous pre-marital festivals, the bride's father is expected to underwrite the wedding itself, which can often run into the thousands of dollars. Following the marriage the bride's parents must continue to give.

In extreme cases, disputes over the dowry can result in the physical torture and eventual death of the bride.

According to one source, some 200 young married women died in the Delhi federal district in 1978 under circumstances similar to Mrs. Hardy's. So far this year there have been four widely publicized incidents here of brides burned to death under suspicious circumstances following dowry disputes.

Because the "accident" takes place in the home with only accomplices as witnesses, police usually do not take action, even if pressed by the victim's parents.

But following recent street demonstrations here by India's fledgling women's rights movement and press publicity concerning the problem, the Delhi police have announced plans to establish a special dowry-murder squad to investigate deaths of young newlywed women.

In Punjab state, a post-mortem inquiry is mandatory in all cases of women dying of unnatural causes during their first seven years of marriage.

Under India's tradition of the extended family, most new brides join their husband's family home. Alone in her adopted family, the bride becomes an easy, isolated target for ridicule or physical abuse if dowry disputes occur.

The attack is often led by the mother-in-law. Feeling threatened by the new "intruder" who has suddenly come between her and her son, the mother-in-law requires little motivation to find fault. She also has a vested interest in the size of the dowry, as her son will eventually have to support her financially.

Although the custom of the bride's father providing a dowry is not new, it is only during India's post-independence period and the emergence of an affluent, urban middle class that the dowry has become subject to high-stakes negotiation and dispute.

The size of the dowry has become such a status symbol that parents of the bridegroom often assemble it like captured booty and send out formal invitations to view it.

Depending on the bridegroom's social standing, a dowry will contain cash, clothing, household furnishings, and expensive appliances. In some instances it will also include "invisibles" such as foreign travel or education.

Civil servants of the elite Indian administrative service or the Indian foreign service are the most highly valued husbands, followed by businessmen, Dr. Dube said. A rung lower are engineers and doctors, she said.

"The psychology of the dowry is that on every important holiday, the girl's family is expected to present something," explained Hingorani. "If they don't, the girl is taunted and tortured. The parents are trying to buy their daughter's happiness, but once it starts it never ends."

Because finding a husband for his daughter is one of a Hindu father's principal duties in life, there is little hesitation in attempting to raise a massive dowry. Many borrow heavily. Those forced to deal with free-lance loan sharks sometimes pay interest rates as high as 15 per cent a month, leaving the family permanently in debt.

In an increasing number of cases, young middle-class women are taking clerical jobs to earn part of their own dowry. Fathers in positions of influence often resort to soliciting bribes to raise money. Those opposed to dowry contend that it is a major cause of official corruption.

Social stigma and embarrassment often prevent a bride from returning to her own parents during a dowry dispute. If physically mistreated, she has only limited protection under the law.

Odds switch to the bulls

THE ECONOMIST

In Pamplona, where the annual "week of madness" ended on July 14, suffocation by the crowd, alcohol poisoning and tough anti-Basque police measures have become more dangerous adversaries for amateur bull-runners than the bulls themselves. The same is not true for the professional matadors in Madrid. They have been suffering badly on the horns of bulls recently.

On one recent Friday aficionados at Madrid's Monumental Ring saw three top matadors gored — and no one left to kill the remaining three bulls. On the following Monday exactly the same thing happened again: one matador ended up with a horn in his armpit and two others with their legs gored. Three of the six bulls lived to be led off for slaughtering.

Why such a succession of disasters? Fifty years ago, on the fatal goring of Spain's greatest matador, a sign read, "Joselito is dead: long live football". But interest in bullfighting has increased since then. There is no shortage of bright would-be matadors: a young novice, El Lobo, continually hangs around the Monumental Ring with a sign saying, "I want a chance to fight in this ring". The main reason for the shambles may be that bulls are more aggressive.

Although none is quite in the class of Coramelo, the bull which was put in a cage with a Bengal tiger and killed it in three minutes, continuous interbreeding has produced unpredictably ferocious beasts. Attempts to rear a bull which will charge in a straight line occasionally backfire and produce animals which aim for the cape but hit the matador. Bulls are generally bigger, too, especially since a scandal of undersize and underweight animals was uncovered several years ago.

One factor which has not changed but seems to be causing as many accidents as ever is the wind. If it blows hard enough to distrub the cape while it is in front of the matador's body, it will provoke an unexpected charge from the bull — which will probably result in a nasty mess.

Getting bigger and more ferocious

To sleep, perchance

Katharine Whitehorn

LONDON — Do you know why, if you miss three hours' sleep, a one-hour nap is often enough to set you right again? Or why you sometimes seem to wake paralyzed, struggling and unable to move? Or, ineed, why you need sleep at all?

Dr. Kirstine Adams does. With long corn-colored hair and a smile like the sun coming out, she looks the kind who must attract endless cliches of the what-does-a-girl-like-you-want-with-brains variety. In fact she is No. 2 at the sleep research clinic in Edinburgh, and last this month presented the results of her research at the Association for the Psychophysiological Study of Sleep in Tokyo.

She showed me round the unit where exhausted housewives and heavy-lidded students sleep with electrodes on their heads for $10 a night; they get even more if they allow blood samples to be taken as well — the researchers sit through the night like so many scientific Draculas drawing off blood through a tube.

A machine records the brainwaves and eye movements — with a raucous buzzer that sounds if the machine drops off, or starts, as it sometimes does, to eat up its own recording paper.

By such methods, over the years, they've found out about the different kinds of sleep. The kind where you dream and have Rapid Eye Movements (REMs), for example, also relaxes your muscles to the point of paralysis — so when you wake sweating and screaming because you cannot run away, it's because your mind begins to wake up before your body's alive again. And there's the deep, slow-wave sleep that does you the most good — so you can sometimes replace, with an hour of mainly slow-wave sleep, the three hours of mixed sleep you missed in the night.

But why you need sleep at all is Kirstine's speciality, and she's been studying it ever since she came to the sleep lab three years ago. Before that, she'd been a chemistry student, found it deadly dull, and left to work as a taster at a nutrition research centre. Finally she brought the two interests together and trained in biochemistry.

She seems a trifle shamefaced about the fact that her big discovery is that you sleep for exactly the reasons your Mummy always said you did — to restore the tissues. Still, it was worth proving scientifically, if only because there's been a theory floating around that, since different kinds of animals and even different people need different amounts of sleep, it might be just an idle habit we all have.

Now it's known to be a simple question of energy, like petrol; you use up your petrol (called ATP) when you're awake, and remake your proteins with it when you're asleep. And those people who feel totally unrefreshed after a long night, it seems, aren't necessarily lying or suffering psychologically; their blood temperature just doesn't go down as far as other people's. So they're still using up some energy when they should be only replacing it.

What sends you to sleep? Boredom, warmth, rhythmic noise — "most lectures provide absolutely ideal conditions," says Kirstine. There's also a way of making people sleep by "rhythmic assault" — as early as 1959 Ian Oswald was putting people to sleep in a flash — literally — with a mixture of rhythmic bright lights and electric shocks.

A man in Harvard, Dr. Pappenheimer, is working on isolating whatever it is the body makes that actually puts you under — if he could find that, it might produce a sleeping pill which would simply imitate natural sleep, instead of producing the variously harmful drug hangovers you get from normal sleeping pills.

He's been chasing it excitedly through the brains of rabbits for years, ever since they discovered that if you injected a wakeful cat with material from the brain of an exhausted goat, there would be something in the goat's brain fluid that would send the cat to sleep. Mind you, I know cats who can scarcely keep awake at the best of times; but I suppose these guys know what they're doing.

Dr. Adams told me one other thing which left me scratching my head. It seems you need sleep as well as food to grow. Under-developed kids, starting puberty late, often grow better in hospital, stop again when they go home. Could it be because, in poor homes, where they sleep several to a room and never escape the telly, they just aren't getting enough sleep?

And if you can grow and grow just by sleeping, and if a mother wants her boy to grow tall, might she not actually try to keep him under the covers for as long as possible, like covering up the growing plant in an asparagus bed? My son is over six foot, and just turned 15; come to think of it, he does spend an awful lot of time in bed . . . but honestly, I really didn't do it on purpose.

Shareholders still carry torch for bankrupt Barcelona firm

TORONTO (CP) — Faithful shareholders of Barcelona Traction, Light and Power Co. Ltd. still go through the motions of an annual meeting.

The company was declared bankrupt in 1948 by a small court in Spain and its assets were ordered sold.

But the annual ritual required to keep the company legally alive was carried out again this week. Directors were elected, auditors reappointed and financial statements presented as required by Canadian law.

Chairman Howard Bachrach offered only faint hopes for the future, quoting an earlier report by the company.

"Although there are no favorable indications whatsoever, one may not altogether exclude all hope that responsible persons in authority may one day recognize that this company and its shareholders should obtain compensation."

The major shareholder, a Belgian company, financed a 25-year legal battle to recover the assets or gain compensation but abandoned the effort in 1974 after spending millions of dollars on legal costs.

Barcelona was formed early this century by S. F. Pearson, a New York engineer who also established Brazilian Traction — now Brascan Ltd. — and Mexican Light and Power Co., taken over by the Mexican government in 1960.

Barcelona was a thriving company when the Spanish civil war broke out in 1936. The forces of fascist Generalissimo Francisco Franco were financed during the war by Juan March, an entrepreneur who later took over the assets of Barcelona.

Although Barcelona is a Canadian company, it issued bonds payable in British pounds and Spanish pesetas. March was a big buyer of the sterling bonds in the war and post-war years.

However, the Spanish government imposed controls blocking conversion of pesetas into sterling. Unable to obtain funds from its operating subsidiaries in Spain, the company could not pay the interest on the sterling debt.

A court in Reus, west of Barcelona, declared the company bankrupt. The assets were auctioned, with the March interests the only bidder.

Replacement costs of the assets has been estimated at more than $200 million or $100 a share.

Crown Z Stores to move

BURNABY (CP) — The head office of Crown Zellerbach Stores, the retail arm of Crown Zellerbach Ltd., will be moved to Calgary before the end of the year, a company spokesman said Monday.

He said the offices are being transferred because the retail company does most of its business in Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Employees at the Burnaby office have been given the option of transferring to Calgary though the company willtry to provide jobs for those who wish to remain, the spokesman said.

1,000 on stream

MONTREAL (CP) — The Bank of Montreal now has 1,000 Canadian branches tied to its central computer system, making it one of the most automated banks in the world. Another 244 branches have yet to be hooked up to the system.

Alsands okayed

CALGARY (CP) — The provincial Energy Resources Conservation Board has given conditional approval to the $5-billion Alsands project.

In a preliminary decision released today, the board said the oil-sands development would be in the public interest of Alberta and, subject to "certain requirements respecting operational details," would be technically and environmentally acceptable and consistent with principles of resource conservation.

The oil-sands plant would be the largest in Canada and the third such plant in the Fort McMurray area of northeastern Alberta. Great Canadian Oil Sands Ltd. and Syncrude Canada Ltd. already have plants in operation.

The board said any adverse social effects of the proposed development could be largely avoided by constructing a new town to support the plant, and by "concerted action on related issues of concern to the Town of Fort McMurray and other residents of the region."

The board is prepared to grant the application subject to terms that will be set out in a later report and subject to approval of the provincial environment department. Cabinet approval is also necessary.

The board said its preliminary decision is expected to speed development of the project.

The board's decision was based on evidence at public hearings held during the last two months.

The Alsands Project Group, a consortium of nine companies led by Shell Canada Resources Ltd., proposes a plant capable of producing 140,000 barrels a day of synthetic crude oil and liquefied petroleum gases.

The project site is about 65 kilometres north of Fort McMurray.

Coffee hiked

TORONTO (CP) — General Foods Ltd. has increased the wholesale price of instant coffee by about two cents an ounce, matching recent rises in ground coffee prices.

The company said green bean prices have gone up more than 50 per cent since mid-March while instant coffee prices have increased less than 10 per cent in the same period.

Neglect under fire

City council's planning committee will zero in on some city properties which have been neglected for up to six years.

Aldermen recommended Tuesday action be taken under cleanup and demolition legislation.

The properties are 1528 Camosun, on which renovations began in 1975 to make the house a multiple-use dwelling, and the Mulek property adjoining View Towers, dating from 1973 where a second apartment tower was to have been erected.

The owner of the Camosun property will be given the chance to say why the city should not proceed with a demolition order for the site, which is now zoned for townhouse use. The Advisory Planning Commission also will be asked to review the property for possible rezoning.

An inspection of the Mulek site will be made by the city enginer, who will recommend steps council may take under the Municipal Act to improve the appearance of damaged hoarding or to remove the source of complaints, which are unfinished walls and footings, excavation and protruding construction steel.

Ald. John Hays suggested a new bylaw to distinguish between temporary and "permanent" fencing at a construction site in the absence of an active building permit.

"I don't believe, if we have the authority to designate heritage houses and to order buildings to be demolished, that we can't enforce a decent hoarding bylaw," he said.

Before the Judge

A 17-year-old charged with a weekend break-in at a Bastion Square restaurant was remanded in custody until today for election of trial method and possible bail hearing.

Darwin Charles Shaver, no fixed address, appeared in Victoria provincial court Tuesday in connection with the Sunday break-in at the Coach And Four Restaurant, 19 Bastion Square.

However, Judge Fred Green noted that the youth appeared to be sleepy in his appearance and ordered the remand when Shaver declined an invitation to speak to the duty legal aid lawyer, Barry Mah Ming.

More than $2,500 in cash was taken from the break-in but Victoria police apparently have only recovered slightly more than $600.

Bail was denied to 18-year-old Lloyd David Williamson, 45 Boyd.

Williamson is charged with 25 counts of breaking and entering over a one-month period in the Fairfield-James Bay districts.

He was remanded until next Wednesday for election of trial method.

A Vancouver couple charged with possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking elected trial by judge without jury.

Robert John Hooper, 35, and his 32-year-old wife, Gloria Alice, were charged July 20 after Saanich police found a quantity of the drug in a vehicle.

Their preliminary hearing has been set for Oct. 10.

Green ordered 17-year-old James Edward Brazier to appear before the principal of Esquimalt High School by Sept. 1 to tender an apology.

Brazier, a graduate this year from the school and former of 847 Colville, pleaded guilty to mischief causing wilful damage on June 4 to the school.

Crown counsel Wayne Smith told the court Esquimalt police, on a routine check at 1:45 a.m., spotted four youths beside the school.

When officers investigated, the youths ran but Brazier was apprehended along with four spray bombs, one can of primer paint and a paint brush. Smith said all sides of the school building had been painted, some with obscenities. Damage was placed at $586.28, including $167 for painters. What wasn't included, Smith added, was 34 hours of volunteer student labor to repair the damage.

Green handed Brazier a suspended sentence and six months probation. In addition, Green ordered him to make restitution in the amount of $275 to School District 61 and to tender his apology in person to the school principal.

A 26-year-old was jailed five days for "mooning" on a log boom July 23.

David Edward Jones, 429 Pine, pleaded guilty last Tuesday to performing an indecent act but was remanded until this week in order that Green could hear testimony concerning the gravity of the act.

Five youths saw Jones off the foot of Roberts Street dropping his pants, exposing his buttocks, and then turning around to face them. Esquimalt police used a launch to go out on the log boom to arrest Jones.

Jailed 10 days after pleading guilty to impaired driving was 19-year-old Richard Stanley Kubin, 1015 Kings Road.

Court was informed Kubin was spotted June 30 driving his car into a fence in a Gorge Road apartment parking lot. Kubin went into the apartment block and came out again, this time driving his vehicle into a parked car.

Kubin had been convicted on Jan. 12 of this year of driving while under suspension and was fined $150 on that occasion.

City wants gas

If B.C. Hydro is going to bring natural gas to Vancouver Island "we sure as heck want it downtown," Ald. Bob Wright, chairman of the Victoria city council planning and zoning committee, said Tuesday.

Hydro has told council it is doing field investigation this year concerning the possible extension of natural gas to the island, covering engineering, environmental and social implications and route selection.

But city engineer John Sansom said he was worried that if gas is piped in, "everyone will want a connection," creating chaos in the streets.

To ensure everyone with a legitimate interest is informed, Hydro said a general description is being distributed as a first step in a public and government information program. The utility offered to review the material with council.

Area pair survive air crash

Two Victoria area persons escaped uninjured after a light plane overshot a runway on Pender Island.

Pilot Samuel Jackson, 20, of Mill Bay and his passenger, Alison Williams, 19, of 225 Belleville, were uninjured when the Cessna 172 they were flying from Victoria to South Pender Island landed in a ditch about 5 p.m. Monday after overshooting the runway.

A spokesman for the island's RCMP detachment said the plane was hauled out of the ditch with the front wheels and propeller broken.

"The young fellow was totally unfamiliar with the field here and came the wrong way," RCMP Cpl. Harry Danyluk said. "He ran out of runway."

Noting that the grass strip was a one-way airfield, Danyluk said Jackson had to clear a hill and trees before dropping steeply to the ground. The correct approach leads over open farmland.

Anglicans to aid boat families

The Anglican Church on Vancouver Island is planning to sponsor five Indochinese refugee families in coming to Canada.

And Archdeacon Harry Greenhalgh of St. Paul's Church in Esquimalt says he expects little difficulty reaching the goal.

He said a meeting held in Victoria last week drew 75 persons from 19 parishes throughout the Island.

"Already," he said, "an apartment has been offered in one parish and there are two other parishes that have agreed to sponsor a family."

Greenhalgh said the Anglican Diocese of British Columbia has set up a special refugee trust fund to help the boat people when they arrive.

Donations may be sent to 912 Vancouver St., Victoria.

James McPherrin, director of finance for the B.C. diocese, said all donations are tax deductible and receipts will be issued automatically.

Park offer hinges on land freeze

An 11.5-acre property near Beckwith Avenue must be released from the Agricultural Land Reserve before B.C. Hydro will sell it to Saanich for use as a park and recreation area.

Council was told by head planner Gil Laurenson Hydro has requested Saanich apply for release of the land, which is part of the 26-acre North Quadra subdivision proposed for exclusion from the reserve.

Municipal staff were asked to produce more information before aldermen decide to negotiate the park purchase, proposed by the planning department.

According to Laurenson the municipality would pay for the land by selling lots for residential development.

South Saanich Farmer's Institute spokesman Art Garcia said there appears to be no valid reason for Hydro's request — it just indicates the company has a vendetta against the land commission.

The land could stay in the reserve and still be used as a park, Garcia said.

Council requested the institute, which usually submits a report on ALR appeals by the municipality, study the situation.

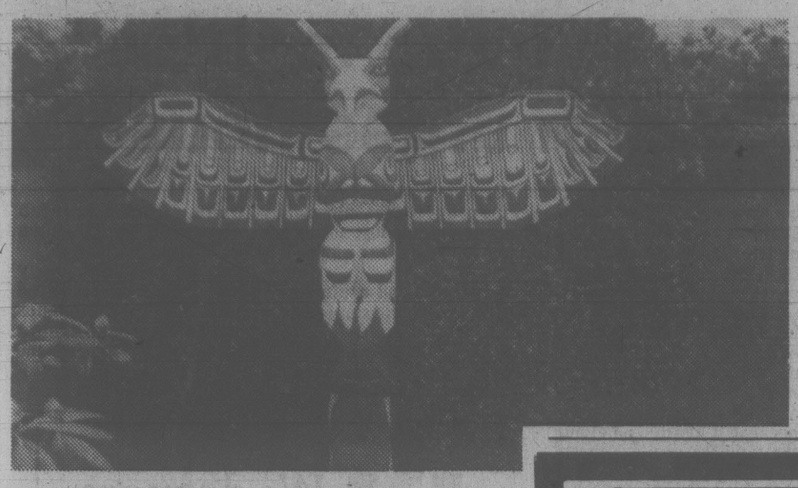

In other business council approved rezoning of property on Kisber and Christmas Avenue for a 13-unit apartment building, but not before Ald. Sandy Noel recommended the municipality get tough with apartment dwellers who refuse to use parking stall and park in the street.

He said the practice is a major problem on Shelbourne and poses a serious traffic problem.

Council also approved rezoning of property on Vernon Avenue for construction of a professional medical building.

The rezoning application was rejected earlier this year by a 4-4 vote because aldermen felt it might jeopardize plans for a packaged commercial-residential development in the civic core, but those plans have been abandoned.

It was strongly opposed this time around by Ald. Irene Block, who said there weren't enough parking spaces for the size of the building.

STOLEN TOTEM, a six-foot Indian carving worth $2,500, disappeared from outside a house in the Mt. Douglas district July 6 or 7, and Saanich police have asked for help in tracking it down. It is described as weighing 80-100 pounds, of carved wood, with large wings on a bird-like figure. Colors are red, white and blue. Anyone with knowledge of the totem's whereabouts or of persons who removed it is asked to contact Det.-Sgt. Bill Chisholm or Det.-Cons. Chris Upward at 388-4321.

Empty lot feud near end

Saanich and Greater Victoria school board are about to resolve a 10-year argument over a vacant lot.

Mayor Mel Couvelier said Tuesday Saanich will receive the property, located at Burns and Boleskine Roads next to Tolmie school, as soon as the paperwork is completed.

Couvelier says Saanich needs the property to complete redevelopment plans in the area.

But the school board has been refusing requests for the past 10 years.

The mayor even threatened to complain to Education Minister Pat McGeer this year after the latest request was turned down by the board.

The school district has had possession of the land since 1908 when it was deeded to the Crown and conveyed to the school board for education purposes.

When the district decides it no longer needs the land it reverts to Saanich, but some trustees said they wanted to keep it because it is a valuable piece of property.

Esquimalt fights trucked sewage

Esquimalt council is seeking a meeting with Defence Minister Allan McKinnon to express its opposition to the proposed dumping station for septic tank contents at Macaulay Point.

McKinnon has already met representatives of the Capital Regional District on their request to traverse defence department property to construct an extension to pumping facilities the region already owns on Macauley Point.

Esquimalt is opposing the relocation of the dump from Millstream Road. This is the first time council has directly approached the minister.

Mayor Art Young, Esquimalt's regional director, says his council wants McKinnon to know firsthand its opposition to septage being transported by trucks through the municipality's residential streets.

"The problem should be taken care of in the area where the problem is created," he said, referring to View Royal, parts of Saanich and other areas now on septic tanks.

Pension plea fails again

Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber was thwarted once again Tuesday in his attempt to get the provincial government to urge the governments of Canada and the United Kingdom to agree to index one anothers' pensions.

Pensioners who leave the U.K. to live in Canada have their pensions frozen at the rate they received at the time they left the country because Canada does not have a reciprocal social security agreement.

Canada and the U.K. have such agreements with other countries that allow the pensions of immigrants to increase at the rate they increase in their country of origin.

For the first time in numerous attempts, Barber was successful in bringing the matter before the house, but this time was shot down by Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis.

Curtis' excuse was simply that he doesn't know the "precise magnitude of the problem" and B.C. is not supposed to deal with international matters.

Barber's motion, however, simply requests B.C. urge the governments of Canada and U.K. to protect the pensions of British citizens living in B.C. by entering into a reciprocal social security agreement.

Barber said there are an estimated 22,000 pensioners of British origin living in Canada whose pensions are frozen. Many are in Victoria, he said.

Their pensions are unfairly frozen because they are victims of the lack of an agreement, he said.

His motion won't cost one cent and only calls for fair play, he said.

But Curtis was successful in having Barber's motion tabled. He did, however, promise to meet Barber to explore the matter.

Shelve the metrics, Smith urges house

Oak Bay Socred backbencher Brian Smith wants Canada to slow down its metric conversion while the U.S., which he says is 11 years behind, catches up.

To back his motion in the legislature Tuesday, Smith cited the story of what he called a federal "metric media bully" who badgered a Vancouver radio station because it insisted on giving the temperature in Fahrenheit.

He said the $22,000-a-year civil servant will next propose "bounties placed in the hands of children to snitch on their parents if they take the temperature at home with a Farenheit thermometer or use a teaspoon to measure condiments in the kitchen."

Smith called on the provincial government to urge the federal government to modify the policy so that Imperial measurements must accompany metric measurements.

This would end confusion and protect the consumer, he said.

Some price increases are sneaking in under the guise of metric measurements, he said.

Dead silence greeted Smith when he sat down from making his motion.

Science and Technology Minister Pat McGeer saved Smith's Socred colleagues from having to vote against the motion by moving the motion be adjourned (tabled).

Trinity wins degree fight

Trinity Western, a highly religious college in Langley, has been given permission to grant full four-year bachelors' degrees following passage of a contentious private bill in the legislature Tuesday.

The bill, put forward by Socred Central Fraser Valley MLA Bill Ritchie, was the second-to-last order of business in the just-ended session and generated heated debate from the Opposition benches.

NDP MLAs objected not only to the provisions the college imposes forcing prospective instructors to swear to 12 strongly-worded religious statements of faith, but also to the method the bill was "railroaded" through the house.

They suggested the bill, which makes the college only the fourth degree granting university in the province, is of such importance it should have been brought forward by the minister of education, not by a rookie backbencher.

And there was so little information accompanying the bill they said they had no opportunity to determine if the college is capable of being granted such status.

But the Socreds said there is nothing to fear. The college is a private institution and receives no public funds.

And as such it can dictate the type of instruction it wished.

Students and teachers go to the college with their eyes open, Premier Bill Bennett said. If it is their desire to be educated or to teach there, that decision is up to them.

The statement of faith that Trinity adheres to and which instructors must swear to follows:

Trinity Western College adheres to a statement of faith indentical to that of the Evangelical Free Church of America. We believe:

The Scriptures, both Old and New Testaments, to be the inspired Word of God, without error in the original writings, the complete revelation of His will for the salvation of men, and the Divine and final authority for all Christian faith and life.

In one God, creator of all things, infinitely perfect and eternally existing in three persons, Father, Son and Holy Spirit.

That Jesus Christ is true God and true man, having been conceived of the Holy Ghost and born of the Virgin Mary. He died on the cross a sacrifice for our sins according to the Scriptures. Further, He arose bodily from the dead, ascended into heaven, where at the right hand of the Majesty on High, He now is our High Priest and Advocate.

That the ministry of the Holy Spirit is to glorify the Lord Jesus Christ, and during this age to convict men, regenerate the believing sinner, indwell, guide, instruct and empower the believer for godly living and service.

That man was created in the image of God but fell into sin and is therefore lost and only through regeneration by the Holy Spirit can salvation and spiritual life be obtained.

That the shed blood of Jesus Christ and His resurrection provide the only ground for justification and salvation for all who believe, and only such as receive Jesus Christ are born of the Holy Spirit, and thus become children of God.

That water baptism and the Lord's Supper are ordinances to be observed by the Church during the present age. They are, however, not to be regarded as means of salvation.

That the true Church is composed of all such persons who through saving faith in Jesus Christ have been regenerated by the Holy Spirit and are united together in the body of Christ of which He is the head.

That only those who are thus members of the true Church shall be eligible for membership in the local Church.

That Jesus Christ is the Lord and Head of the Church, and that every local church has the right under Christ to decide and govern its own affairs.

In the personal and premillenial and imminent coming of our Lord Jesus Christ and that this "Blessed Hope" has a vital bearing on the personal life and service of the believer.

In the bodily resurrection of the dead; of the believer to everlasting blessedness and joy with the Lord, of the unbeliever to judgment and everlasting conscious punishment.

I am in complete agreement with the above Statement of Faith and would support that position at all times before the students and friends of the College.

Six-month net of $14.2M on BCRIC $151M revenue

The B.C. Resources Investment Corporation — amid speculation it is going to buy the forest giant MacMillan-Bloedel — reported Tuesday six-month net earnings of $14.2 million.

The consolidated net earnings were on $151.8 million in revenue accumulated between Jan. 1 and June 30.

When questioned about the Mac-Bio takeover rumors in the legislature on the last day of the sitting, Bennett accused the NDP of being party to rumors that could hurt unsophisticated investors

Replying to a question from Victoria New Democrat Charles Barber about the rumors, reported earlier by a local radio station, Bennett advised against "fueling of speculation" by the NDP.

"The only people who get hurt by this speculation are the unsuspecting shareholders," Bennett said.

BCRIC's revenues and earnings reflect 81 per cent of the results of Canadian Cellulose Co. Ltd. and 100 per cent of Kootenay Forest Products Ltd. and Plateau Mills Ltd.

Also reflected in the earnings are dividends from the corporation's 10-per-cent shareholding in Westcoast Transmission Ltd. and $2.3 million of interest income, primarily from the proceeds of the recent public share offering.

The provincial government offered five free shares in the corporation this summer to every eligible British Columbian, with an option to purchase up to 5,000 more. A total of 81,250,000 shares were purchased, yielding the corporation gross proceeds of $487.5 million.

The six-month revenue-earning picture presented Tuesday by the resources corporation cannot be compared with the same period last year because BCRIC was not incorporated until February, 1978.

David Helliwell, president and chief executive officer, said the results also should not be projected to the end of the year because of the substantial interest income the corporation will be receiving in the second half from funds from the public-share offering.

The almost $490 million invested in short-term instruments is earning the corporation more than $1 million a week before tax.

Helliwell said the corporation has been examining a number of prospects for future investment.

"Sometime within the next six, or perhaps 12 months, I would expect BCRIC to have made at least one major investment decision, probably in the resource sector and likely within British Columbia," he said.

Buy 50% of PWA, says MLA

A Socred backbencher with investment expertise is urging the B.C. Resources Investment Corporation to buy 50 per cent of Pacific Western Airlines.

Angus Ree (North Vancouver—Capilano) said the half interest of the airline now owned by the Alberta government would cost about $50 million.

When Premier Bill Bennett was approached with the idea, he suggested the now independent resources corporation buy 51 per cent to bring the controlling interest of the airline back to B.C.

Ree is a former legal counsel to the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

Rocks fly at Endako

FRASER LAKE (CP) — A rock-throwing incident broke out Tuesday at the strike-bound Endako mine as management sent out a molybdenum shipment from behind union pickets.

A nine-truck convoy, escorted by security personnel, left the mine before dawn and was met by several rock-throwing strikers, members of the Association of Industrial Mechanics and Allied Workers. Police said windshields were damaged, but nobody was injured.

The 480 mine employees of Placer Developments Ltd. went on strike Feb. 14 to back contract demands. The strike has been a bitter one, with rock-throwing and shooting incidents involving trucks crossing picket lines.

Placer has been selling the molybdenum shipments on the spot market for more than $20 a pound. The normal contract price for the metal, used for making alloys, is $6 a pound.

The union wants the company to grant amnesty to any workers who have committed violent acts during the strike. The company insists that disciplinary action be taken against at least 11 union members.

Hugh Ladner, a provincial mediator appointed by Labor Minister Allan Williams, proposed last month wage and fringe benefit increases totalling 24 per cent in the first year of a two-year contract and nine per cent in the second year.

On July 9, the union asked for an additional 15 cents to be added to wages Jan. 1, 1981. Base rate now is $6.43 an hour.

The company turned down the proposal.

Winery talks sour

PORT MOODY (CP) - Employees of Andres Wines (B.C.) Ltd. went on strike Tuesday at a company operation here.

The 38 workers, brewery union members, walked off the job about 11 a.m. following a breakdown in talks.

Company manager Jim Berry said the company has offered a two-year pact with wage increases of 70 cents an hour, retroactive to March 1, and a further 65-cents-an-hour raise effective March 1, 1980.

Base rate under the old agreement, which expired Feb. 28, was $8.72 an hour.

Berry said no further talks were scheduled.

'Jekyll-Hyde' gets 15 years

VANCOUVER (CP) — A man described by a British Columbia Supreme Court judge as having a Jekyll and Hyde character, was sentenced Tuesday to a minimum 15 years imprisonment after being found guilty of murdering a partner in a drug deal.

Mr. Justice Kirke Smith sentenced Robert James Shannon to life imprisonment for the Nov. 11, 1976 murder of William Black near Roberts Creek, about 50 kilometres northwest of Vancouver, but added five years to the 10-year minimum term to be spent before being eligible for parole.

Crown counsel Leonard Doust said Shannon entered Canada in 1971, assumed a different identity to foil police and for the next five years acquired respectibility working as a drug addiction counsellor.

Mr. Justice Smith said Shannon is a "highly intelligent and highly dangerous man, a Jekyll and Hyde."

Stadium option

VANCOUVER (CP) — A group trying to dissuade city council from approving a sports stadium on the Pacific National Exhibition grounds unveiled Tuesday plans for a new 60,000-seat facility in the downtown area.

A spokesman for the Downtown Stadium Committee said the proposed stadium would be located on the north shore of False Creek and would house baseball, soccer and football.

Fourth suspect

NELSON (CP) — An unidentified fourth suspect in the $150,000 jewelry store robbery in this West Kootenay city was captured late Tuesday in Spokane, Wash.

City police officers were in Okanogan, Wash., on Tuesday questioning Gary Norman Olson, 18, Harold Jay Carlson, 39, and Henry Frank Vavra, 49, all of Spokane, who were arrested earlier.

Tourism tips

DUNCAN — Bill Taylor, operation services branch manager for Tourism B.C., said members of the B.C. work force must be more productive and polite to impress tourists.

Lawyer takes bike helmets to high court

VANCOUVER (CP) — A city lawyer is asking the British Columbia Supreme Court to quash a regulation which states motorcycle riders must wear helmets.

James McNeney, acting on behalf of three clients, asked the court to order the motor vehicles superintendent to hold public hearings on the suitablity of motorcycle helmets and to come up with new helmet safety regulations.

The lawyer also asked that the superintendent be restrained from enacting the current helmet law in the meantime.

McNeney also filed affidavits querying possible negative effects of helmets — such as head and neck injuries.

'Cancer pesticide' gets the nod

VANCOUVER (CP) - The provincial highways ministry will be allowed to continue using a pesticide said to contain a cancer-causing agent, because of a ruling by the British Columbia Pesticide Control Appeal board.

The board has ruled that there will be no adverse effects from the use of Tordon 22K to control Canada thistle weed growing along provincial roads, board chairman Bayne Vance said Tuesday.

The United States National Cancer Institute has said that the active agent in Tordon 22K, picloram, can cause cancer in rats, said Vance. He said, however, further checks by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency found that massive doses would be needed to endanger humans.

But the group which launched the appeal say it still feels the pesticide may be dangerous.

"We are considering the possibility of appealing the decision," said Louise Price, spokesman for the Smithers community law centre.

She said the group also has received telephone calls from people throughout the province who are interested in appealing such permits in their areas.

The board held three days of hearings in which it heard testimony from 25 opponents to the spraying before making its decision.

Tordon 22K is sprayed extensively throughout the province but its use is limited to "non-edible crops", said Vance.

Meanwhile, residents of Penticton say Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt has promised he will demand an explanation for a recent aerial spraying accident there involving Tordon 22K.

The chemical was being sprayed over Indian land near the city when it leaked from a plane. Area residents have said their crops were extensively damaged as a result.

But Vance said vegetables from the area were checked by the branch and were found to contain "either no detectable traces of Tordon 22K or up to only .01 part per million."

Hydro project dangers detailed

VANCOUVER (CP) - Damage to fisheries could range between $88 million and $372 million over the next 50 years if a massive hydro-electric project proceeds in north-central British Columbia, says a study on the proposal.

The study, conducted jointly by the federal fisheries and marine service and the International Pacific Salmon Fisheries Commission, monitored salmon in river systems which would be affected by the project.

The study, which took three years to compile and was financed by B.C. Hydro, concludes that the project would have "unavoidable adverse effects on the environment." It also states the lives of Indians residing in the area would be disrupted and warns of damage to the commercial and sport fishery.

The project involves a major expansion of the Kemano power plant built by the Aluminum Co. of Canada Ltd. 65 kilometres southeast of Kitimat.

The project, which would involve construction of a new dam and tunnel and extensive flooding of the shoreline of Nanika and Kidprice lakes, would lower the flows of the Nechako, Morice and Nanika rivers.

The study outlines certain minimum standards of water flow, temperature and dissolved gases that must be maintained to avoid total disaster. It also advocates nine additional studies.

Pat Bay Highway traffic: A slowdown in 1978 but how soon they forget

That old road villain the speeder is back

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

One year ago motorists were concerned about a gas shortage and were driving slower as a conservation measure.

They were holding close to the speed limit in Victoria and on the Pat Bay Highway.

The accident rate declined.

But how soon they forget, says motor vehicle superintendent R.G. Whitlock.

"The accident rate is rising. We're in for a bad year."

Speed is the villain, he said.

"Everyone seems to be driving faster this year than in 1978, both in town and on the highways. This higher speed is reflected in a higher number of accidents."

It is a great shame, he said, because Victoria had done relatively well last year.

There had been 6,039 accidents in the Greater Victoria area in 1977 but in 1978, despite a larger number of cars on the road, the accident total fell to 5,903.

"There are a number of factors involved in accidents: road conditions, lighting, weather conditions and drinking.

"But speed can be a crucial factor. If everyone is driving at the same speed the chances for an accident are low.

"But when drivers try to overtake each other, that's when accidents happen."

It's not easy to understand why motorists have decided they should drive faster than they did last year.

But the results are evident every day.

"One driver will start it. He will pass the others at a high rate of speed. Unfortunately, people tend to be competitive. The driver who got passed will speed up to try to get in front. It becomes a chain reaction and everyone is doing it.

"With everyone trying to overtake everyone else the situation becomes dangerous."

High speeds in themselves create danger. But even more hazardous is the situation where drivers are all travelling at different rates of speed.

In a perfect world, motorists would travel at a steady rate just below the speed limit in the right hand lane, leaving the left lane clear for those in a hurry to pass at the speed limit.

The number of accidents would decline sharply.

The problem is not on the highways alone.

When motorists are exceeding the speed limit on the freeways, they are less likely to be content with 50 km/h in town.

Saanich police confirmed they have noticed more speeding, especially in the 50 km/h zones. They have issued 350 more tickets than at the same time last year.

In 50 km/h areas, the total number of speeding tickets in the first six months was 2,400, up from 1,800 in the same period last year.

Highway ticketing is down to 173 from 283 but that doesn't mean there are fewer speeders.

Police manpower is a big factor in enforcement and from observation the number of speeding cases seems to have increased.

One bright spot was noted. There were fewer violators in school zones this year than in 1978.

Victoria is not the only area worried about the increase in speed-related accidents.

Vancouver appears headed for an all-time record after having a relatively good year in 1978.

The accident total had fallen to 22,919 in 1978 from 25,379 in 1977.

Max Low

I feel like the author of a Dear Maxie column this week. Suddenly I'm surrounded by groups needing money, people wanting to give money, people who would like to get through to people and a man in need of companionship.

I thought you'd like to know those young Victoria rowers will all make it to the national championships in Welland, Ont., and to the Henley Regatta in St. Catharines after all. And so will their boats.

Moved by my Saturday column (which explained how the Victoria City Rowing Club was roughly $1,000 short and that some of the younger rowers probably wouldn't be able to go), a Victoria group called the United Commercial Travellers wrote a cheque for the whole $1,000 early Monday morning.

It was all a trifle unorthodox, actually. UCT secretary Wally Marmo explains:

"We were at a picnic on Sunday when some of our members started discussing your column. Most of us were pretty upset that these young rowers who do so well for Victoria might not get the chance to compete and we wanted to do something to help them.

"Trouble is, our club doesn't normally meet until September and there were only a few of us there. But we thought, hell, it's an emergency. We've got the money and they need it. And there were enough of us to make the decision and write the cheque. I'm sure the rest of our members will go along with us."

Rowing club president John Alexander was pretty dumbfounded at the instant success of their appeal for support from city people. His first reaction:

"That's super! Now no one needs to stay behind."

I don't know if Dermod Travis can expect such instant success but he began his introduction to me by asking:

"If you were deaf, Max, how would you have answered this telephone?"

Now, that's a bit much for me on a Monday and I've never been much good at riddles, anyway. But Dermod marched into the newsroom later with an intriguing little device called Porta-Tel, which he is helping to market for MOR Systems Ltd. of Victoria.

For the Porta-Tel owner, lights flash when the phone rings. The deaf person places the phone handset on top of his Porta-Tel and neat green letters appear in message form on the tiny computer screen. They do, that is, as long as whoever's on the other end of the line has a similar unit. You can then type messages on your little keyboard and carry on a normal telephone conversation.

Porta-Tel is very portable. Weighing only four pounds and just a few inches in size, it can be used anywhere there's a phone — in a public booth, at a friend's home or when staying at a hotel on vacation.

Each unit costs $550 and, says Travis, that's an exempt price for the deaf. Exempt from what? I ask innocently. Why, exempt from profit, of course.

The same unit sold to businesses — like banks, travel agencies, hotels or taxis which know they have a deaf clientele and want to serve them — costs $750, Travis says.

In Edmonton, where there are 30,000 deaf people, police and fire departments already have Porta-Tels installed, he explains.

"And in Victoria, where we know there are at least 1,000 deaf people, the NEED Crisis Line is considering putting one in to handle all emergency calls," he adds.

Apart from wishing to promote sales, Travis believes Porta-Tel offers a great new service for deaf residents. But, he says, those residents are pretty hard to find.

"A blind person has his cane but there is no way to tell when a person is deaf, so they are called the invisible handicapped," he points out. "It's difficult to show a thing like Porta-Tel to the deaf as they don't watch television or listen to the radio and they rarely attend meetings."

Most of them read, though, he figures. So if you are deaf and would like to know a little more about the gadget, get someone to call Travis at 388-4959.

And finally, I got a call from Isobel Morrison at Gorge Road Hospital.

"We have Lee Halberg, who used to talk about fishing on the radio many years ago, here," she said, "and he is very lonely."

Now 75, Lee had a stroke some time ago and is confined to his electric wheelchair.

"But he just needs someone to come in and visit him and maybe even take him to a baseball game occasionally or down to the wharf to watch the boats," Mrs. Morrison suggested.

"Probably most people don't realize he is here," she said. "He just needs companionship and I'm sure if some other old fishermen knew, they would be glad to come in and visit him."

(For more details you can contact Mrs. Morrison at 386-2464, local 279).

Septic tank dumping plan killed

The Capital Regional District's public works committee today decided to abandon plans for a controversial dumping station for septic tank contents and go ahead with a plan to turn septage into compost.

The decision was made after directors and engineering staff visited such a facility in Kelowna.

In a report today, regional engineer Norman Howard said a preliminary investigation and design for a composting facility capable of handling up to 3.1 million gallons a year has been made based on the experience of the Kelowna project.

Four holding lagoons will be constructed with provision for a fifth.

Committee chairman Dave Hill said the Macaulay Point site appears to be a low priority because of the objections of Esquimalt council but the CRD should still keep its options open with Defence Minister Allan McKinnon "as a low priority."

The committee authorized the engineering department not only to proceed with the design but also authorized the land commissioner to obtain an option on suitable parcels of land capable of being used for the proposed composting facility.

A bylaw will be prepared to increase the borrowing power of the board from $200,000 to $400,000 for the composting facility.

Regional board chairman Murray Glazier stressed that the composting facility should be self-supporting and financed by those using the service. He said, though, the facility would probably not be self-supporting for the first two years.

Howard said that the Kelowna composting facility sold the loam-like material to farmers.

Sooke director Charles Perkins recommended that a bylaw be drawn up banning septic tank truck operators from dumping anywhere else in the capital region other than the composting facility.

Driver faces six charges in mishap

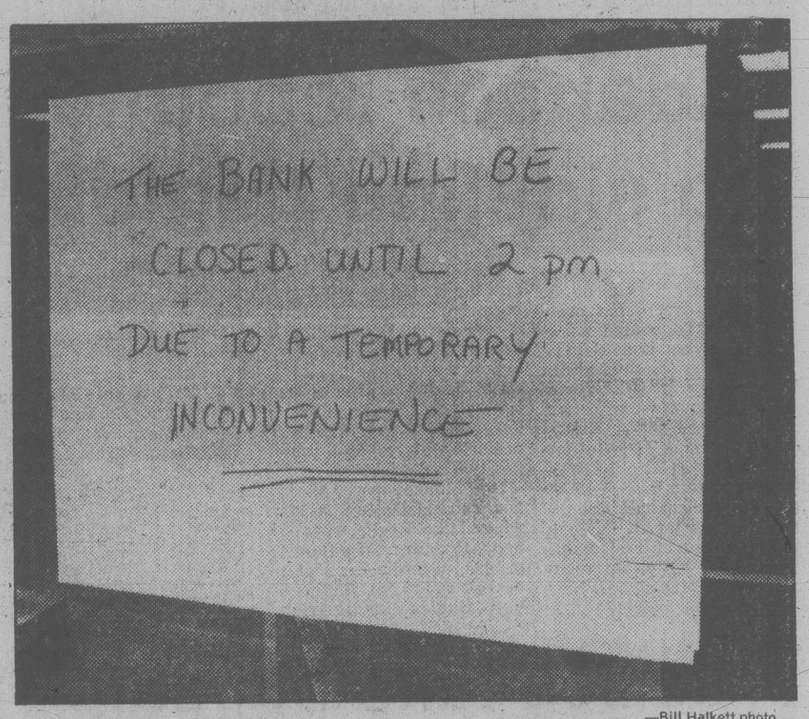

A 20-year-old driver was charged with six offences following a three-car crash on the Victoria-Esquimalt boundary just before 9 p.m. Tuesday.

An Esquimalt police spokesman said seatbelts prevented serious injuries in the $12,000 pileup at Esquimalt and Dominion when an eastbound truck apparently crossed the centre line on a curve.

He said said Kenneth Barker, 2921 Doncaster, was arrested and charged with leaving the scene of an accident, impaired driving, theft of a motor vehicle, dangerous driving, possession of stolen property and driving without a licence.

The truck, owned by W.J. Green Forestry Services, 2778 Millstream, was in a head-on collision with a westbound car belonging to Romeo's Pizza and driven by David Fai, 20, of 4341 Cedar Hill Road. It then struck a westbound car driven by Daniel Grant, 29, of 258 Gorge.

Grant and Fai were treated for minor head cuts.

Typical Oak Bay understatement after Tuesday's robbery

Curly-wigged bandit could be a repeater

Tuesday's robbery of the Royal Bank at 2154 Oak Bay Ave. was the work of a curly-wigged bandit who has already struck two other times in Oak Bay and Saanich this summer, Oak Bay police believe.

The man, wearing a woman's dark brown wig, entered the bank shortly before noon and shoved a brown paper bag in front of teller Maureen Cain. A message scrawled on the side of the bag ordered her to fill it with cash.

She put $2,345.69 in the bag and the man walked casually out the door, then broke into a run heading west along Oak Bay Avenue.

No weapon was seen. Three customers and the rest of the bank staff were unaware of the robbery until the man had left.

Oak Bay police Sgt. Dick Lopeter said the description of the man closely matches that of a bandit who held up the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, 1555 McKenzie, July 5 and the Toronto-Dominion Bank, 2533 Estevan, June 18.

It dips, it rises, it soars

Look out for flying toobees

Throw Toobee like a ball. It dips, rises, curves or soars in a straight line. Throws of 50 yards are possible, its maker claims, and it's made from completely recycled material — used aluminum pop or beer cans.

Toobee is the Californian way to spell inventor Dale Klahn's version of an aerodynamic tube, a cut-down can with the end cut out.

Toobee made an appearance in B.C. recently when three young Berkeley, Calif., travellers found themselves waiting for a ferry at the Swartz Bay terminal.

The Toobee is thrown much the same way as a football, and the device in flight is reminiscent of a Frisbee in flight.

Ian Mitchell and Scott Austin, both 17, and Judy Keith, 16, are financing their trip through B.C. by selling the two-inch-long cans. They say they bought them wholesale in California for 75 cents and are selling them at $1.50.

The trio said inventor Klahn is a physicist who quit a high-paying job to market Toobee.

Company bids to halt strike

Victoria Plywood Ltd. has applied to the B.C. Labor Relations Board for a cease and desist order in an effort to end a strike that has shut down operations for nearly two weeks.

Company president Newton Cameron said the application was filed Tuesday.

About 200 employees, members of the International Woodworkers of America, are out of work as a result of the dispute which closed the plywood plant July 19.

Roger Lewis, president of the Victoria Local of the IWA, said Tuesday the dispute centres around the company's decision to hire carpenters from outside the plant to replace two who retired recently.

Lewis said it is the union's position that Victoria Plywood employees should have had the opportunity to serve an apprenticeship and be given the carpentry jobs.

"The company has steadfastly refused to put any apprentices in operation at all," Lewis said.

Cameron said he didn't want to go into the details of the dispute because it is now before the LRB.

He said the company feels the union should have filed a grievance on the matter rather than go on strike.

Lions' kicker bails out a sputtering offense

GETTING HIS MAN is John Beaton of British Columbia Lions who keeps Saskatchewan's Mike Strickland in his grasp during Canadian Football League game Tuesday in Vancouver. Lions kept Roughriders under control well enough to chalk up 24-15 victory. (CP laserphoto)

VANCOUVER — Lui Passaglia's accurate boot bailed out a sputtering offense Tuesday and the British Columbia Lions continued their unbeaten stroll through the Canadian Football League.

Passaglia booted five field goals and running back Larry Key added B.C.'s only touchdown with 1:34 remaining as the Lions defeated Saskatchewan Roughriders 24-15 in Empire Stadium to record their fourth consecutive victory.

The Lions offence moved the ball well between the 25 yard lines in the first half, but quarterback Jerry Tagge and his offensive mates couldn't push across for a major score.

Passaglia bailed out the offence by connecting on field goals of 27, 23, 47, 20 and 42 yards. He also added singles on a 52-yard punt and wide field goal attempt from 48 yards and also converted the touchdown.

The win before 23,308 fans kept the Lions in first place in the Western Conference, two points ahead of Edmonton Eskimos, who blasted Calgary Stampeders 44-9 in Edmonton.

Wide receiver Freeman Johns scored the lone touchdown for the Roughriders, 0-4, on a 49-yard pass from Tom Clements. Bob Macoritti booted two field goals, two singles off wide field goal attempts and a convert.

Passaglia gave B.C. a 13-11 half-time lead with three field goals in the second quarter, all coming after the sputtering offence failed in Saskatchewan territory.

His 23-yarder at 2:42 of the second quarter came after Holt dropped a Tagge pass deep in the end zone. Two series later, defensive back Emil Nielsen knocked a pass away from Holt at the Saskatchewan 20. Passaglia's 47-yarder made the score 11-10 Saskatchewan.

His third field goal of the quarter came with only 16 seconds remaining after Tagge threw behind Leon Bright in the end zone on a second down play.

Early in the second half, Clements took the Roughriders on their longest drive of the night, moving from the Saskatchewan four to the B.C. 21 before Hinton knocked down a pass intended for Johns.

Macoritti's 28-yard field goal at 9:29 pulled the Riders ahead 15-13, but then the Lions defence, which sacked Clements four times, tightened.

A single and another field goal by Passaglia put the Lions ahead 17-15.

The Riders fate was all but sealed when Clements was sacked back on the seven yard line by defensive end Richard Murray with just over three minutes to go. Macoritti had to punt and the Lions used up most of the remaining time to match downfield for Key's touchdown.

B.C. collected 21 first downs to 13 for Saskatchewan. The Lions had 268 yards of total offence to 241 for the Riders.

Coach without an answer as Stamps get clobbered

Calgary's Mad Pigs played more like a collection of cloned Porky Pigs.

Edmonton Eskimos showed no mercy in the Battle of Alberta as they humiliated the Stampeders 44-9.

The Canadian Football League game, billed as the battle between the top two teams in the Western Football Conference, was as lopsided as Tuesday's score suggests.

"They were in complete control of every facet of the game and you don't know what to do, you don't have an answer," said a bewildered Jack Gotta, Calgary's head coach. "It just happened. Nobody could come up with anything."

The Cowboys started to deflate early in the second quarter after the Calgary defence, which had allowed only 14 points in its previous two games, began to unravel. The vaunted Calgary line, the Mad Pigs, held its own in the first quarter but sagged when the Stampeder attack was consistently blocked by the Eskimos' defensive wall.

While the Calgary defence worked hard the Stampeder offence was being mauled by the Eskimos veteran line: Dave Boone, Dave Fennell, York Hentschel and Ron Estay, backed up occasionally by Jimmy Walker.

Edmonton head coach Hugh Campbell was as surprised as Gotta with the one-sided affair.

Campbell said he had "no idea" his club would thrash the Stampeders so badly but said "I'm very proud of the way our boys performed tonight."

Jim Germany scored two second-quarter touchdowns for Edmonton and the Tommy Scott and Waddell Smith electrified 42,887 fans by catching touchdown passes of 54 and 59 yards respectively from backup quarterback Warren Moon in the fourth quarter.

In an Eastern Conference game in Ottawa, Toronto Argonauts regained a measure of revenge after suffering a 31-2 defeat a week earlier, by upsetting the Roughriders 18-16.

The Argonauts not only knocked off Ottawa but also knocked first string quarterback Condredge Holloway out of the game and, perhaps, out of the lineup for up to six weeks. He was reported to have separated rib cartilages.

Holloway said he was injured early in the first quarter when he fell on the point of the football.

Holloway's departure coupled with the absence of defensive backs Mike Nelms and Ken Downing spelled disaster for the Riders.

I any case, Argo head coach Forrest Gregg termed the game "the most satisfying win we've had so far."

Adanacs rebound to sideline Legion

Manipulated by Coquitlam Adanacs, the dark cloud of disappointment hangs over Esquimalt Legion today.

Legion is out, Coquitlam is in the Western Canada Major Junior Lacrosse League playoff picture after the Adanacs jolted Esquimalt with an 11-9 defeat Tuesday at the Sports Centre.

The win enabled Coquitlam to finish fourth, Now one point ahead of Esquimalt, Coquitlam wraps up regular-season play against New Westminster tonight.

The Adanacs rubbed salt into the wound by rebounding strongly from a 5-1, first-period deficit to eliminate Legion. The Ken Alexander-coached Esquimalt team, which had won five of its first eight, faded sadly by losing 12 of its last 15 games to finish with an 8-15-1, won-lost-tied record.

Don Simons scored three goals and added two assists while Mike Reelie went 2-and-2 to power Coquitlam's offense. Geordie Dean also scored twice for Adanacs with singles coming from Don Gamble, Doug Parent, Bob Jude and Kent Storoshenko.

John Crowther, Wayne Reeve ad Russ Kennedy each scored twice for Legion. Mike Game, Tarey Pollock and Ed Van Dyk added singles.

Coquitlam outshot Legion 55-48.

Bellies take big step to avoid facing Rocks

Victoria Shamrocks have first place locked up and Nanaimo Timbermen are doomed to finish in the Western Lacrosse Association cellar, so personal pride may be the main offering when the Vancouver Island teams wrap up regular-season activity tonight at Memorial Arena.

Shamrocks open semi-final play next Tuesday against the third-place finisher.

New Westminster Salmonbellies took a big step to avoid facing the regular-season champions in the semi-finals by defeating Vancouver Burrards 13-11 Tuesday at Kerrisdale. The win moved second-place Westminster four points ahead of Coquitlam. The Adanacs can achieve a tie for second only by sweeping their last two games.

Brian Tasker scored three goals to lead New Westminster. Bob Tasker scored twice while Len Cimminelli, Ken Brown, Jack Fulton, Bill Mosdell, Wayne Goss, Ivan Tuura, Derek Dickson and Dan Richardson had one each.

Doug Hayes scored four goals for Vancouver while Mike McMillan and Pat Ryan had two each. Pat Differ, Dave Tasker and Mike Holden added singles.

New Westminster goalie Arnie Bird stopped 32 shots and Kelvin Gill made 42 saves for Vancouver.

Kids, opposing pitchers do know Dave Winfield

By Canadian Press

Dave Winfield buys tickets so kids who can't afford them can see baseball games for free. He runs parties before the all-star game so thousands of youngsters can meet their favorite professional stars, have a cookie or two and collect autographs.

Dave Winfield also hits very, very well for San Diego Padres. He leads the National League in hitting with a .345 average, is tied with Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt for the lead in runs batted in with 81, and his 25 home runs puts him third behind Schmidt and Chicago's Dave Kingman.

His fielding, throwing and baserunning aren't bad, either, if you like understatements. Despite all this, though, Winfield insists: "People just don't know who Dave Winfield is."

Atlanta's Phil Niekro knows. The Braves' right-hander gave up three of the five Winfield hits and two of the four Winfield RBIs that helped the Padres to a 10-3 rout of the Braves on Tuesday night.

The kids know who he is, for the David M. Winfield Foundation reportedly will spend $100,000 on them this season.

And if the rest of the people don't know him by now, they may very shortly. Because Dave Winfield has eight hits in his last eight official at-bats, and if he hits safely in his first three trips to the plate against Atlanta tonight, Winfield will place his name in the NL's record book.

"I've had a consistently good season," he says, "but I let my peers determine how good a player I am. (Pittsburgh's Dave) Parker is a great player and you hear people talk about him a lot. People just don't know who Dave Winfield is."

Winfield has seven hits in his last 10 tries against the knuckleballing Niekro, who was thwarted in his effort to become the major leagues' first 15-game winner this season.

"That's a trend I've only reversed in the past few years," said Winfield. "He used to strike me out 10 or 12 times a season. Once he got two strikes on me, I was doomed. But I finally cut down my swing against him and have had a little better luck."

While Winfield wants recognition, Boston Red Sox manager Don Zimmer wants sympathy.

"I want to cry," he said following Tuesday's American League games.

It wasn't only that Zimmer's team lost a doubleheader to the Cleveland Indians, 11-10 in 11 innings and 3-0. It was how the Sox were dropped.

They held a 10-5 lead going into the ninth inning of the first game, but poor relief pitching allowed the Indians to tie the game and send it into extra innings. Then Toby Harrah won it for Cleveland with a run scoring double with two out in the 11th.

"You don't mind these long days when you win 10 ballgames in a row," said Harrah. "It's not easy to win 10 in a row. This is a good indication of the kind of ballclub we have. We've been getting great pitching."

In other AL action, Baltimore defeated Milwaukee 9-5; Kansas City edged Toronto 6-5; Texas routed Detroit 11-3; New York whipped Chicago 7-3; California turned back Seattle 8-1 and Oakland beat Minnesota, 2-1.

In the other NL games, Phil Niekro's brother, Joe, became the first 15-game winner when Houston Astros beat San Francisco Giants 6-4; Los Angeles Dodgers held off Cincinnati Reds 7-6, Montreal Expos blanked St. Louis Cardinals 5-0, Philadelphia Phillies bested Chicago Cubs 4-1 and New York Mets edged Pittsburgh Pirates, 2-1.

Victoria athletes shine

In addition to Wendy Davies, who won the 400-metre hurdles event, three other Victoria athletes came up with outstanding efforts at the Canadian track and field championships at Sherbrooke, Que., at the weekend.

Debbie Scott, Debbie Campbell and Harold Willers came close to the top of their respective events.

Scott clocked a personal best time of four minutes, 16.8 seconds while placing third in the 1,500 metre race; Campbell came within a second of her personal best while finishing second with a 2:03.8 clocking in the 800 metres and Willers came close to his personal best with a heave of 61.88 metres in the hammer throw.

All four Victorians have qualified for the World Cup trials in Quebec City.

Scott, Campbell and Willers have confirmed they will compete in the dual British Columbia-Alberta meet this weekend at Centennial Stadium.

Approximately 100 athletes, including some from the Canadian Pan-American Games squad, will be on hand for the inter-provincial competition.

Mets nip Mussels

HOQUIAM, Wash. — Led by the pitching of Jesse Anderson, who struck out nine batters while fashioning a five-hitter, Grays Harbor Mets defeated Victoria Mussels 4-3 in a Northwest League baseball game Tuesday night.

The Mets' Rusty Tillman singled in a run in the fourth inning and had a double in the sixth.

Victoria rallied in the ninth inning, scoring a run on Gary Ledbetter's double. Calvin Beal came in as pinch runner. But, in the final out of the game, Beal was thrown out at home plate as he tried to score off Nick Kintz' single.

The loss kept Victoria in third place in the Northern Division, one game behind Bellingham Mariners.

The Mariners failed to gain any ground by dropping a 17-3 verdict to the division-leading Walla Walla Padres.

In other games Tuesday, Central Oregon opened up a two-game lead atop the Southern Division by shading Salem 10-9 while Eugene trounced second-place Medford 14-1.

Gamble offered to Yanks

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — The management of Texas Rangers reluctantly offered outfielder Oscar Gamble to New York Yankees on Tuesday night after baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn voided a deal that would have sent three minor leaguers to New York for outfielder Mickey Rivers.

Trading Gamble, the Rangers' leading hitter with a .335 average, was one of two alternative trades given to the commissioner's office by Texas in the deal for Rivers. The other involved giving the Yankees four unnamed minor league players and cash considerations.

The trade, as announced Monday, sent Rivers to the Rangers in exchange for three minor-leaguers and a player to be named later.

Robinson added, "Gamble was never the player to be named later."

'Mileage-miser' rally

In keeping with these times of steadily-diminishing oil reserves, the Vancouver Island Rally Racing Association and CFAX 1070 are sponsoring a "Mileage-Miser Economy Run" on Aug. 12.

Technical inspection and registration gets underway at the Mayfair Shopping Centre parking lot at 8:30 a.m. with the first car out at 11.

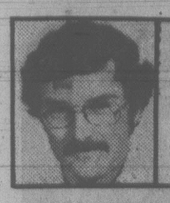

Winners in four classes — V-8, 6-cylinder, 4-cylinder to 1,500 cc. and 4-cylinder above 1,500 cc. — will be determined on the basis of best milage in terms of kilometres per gallon of fuel.

Entry forms may be obtained at Pacific Mazda, Metro Toyota, Cal-Van Auto, Speedline Automotive, Speedway Motors and Metro Honda.

The entry fee is $4 per car and all entries must be submitted by Aug. 7.

CLUB BANNER is placed in position at Crystal Pool by Linda Baxter (left) and Shelley Cuppage just before this morning's opening events in national division 2 swimming meet. Continuing until Saturday, event involves swimmers from four western provinces who are bidding for places in Canadian championships. Heats start at 11 a.m. and finals begin at 6:30 p.m. each day. Cowichan River ready for greater supervision

One of our favorite destinations for a weekend trip on this end of Vancouver Island is the Cowichan River.

It's only an hour and a half from our new home at Pedder Bay and offers the best of both worlds — solitude for the hiker and numerous spacious spots if you want to camp with a group.

On Sunday, we hiked the Cowichan River footpath from Stoltz Pool to the Marie Canyon railway trestle, about four miles round trip, and never saw another person.

The Cowichan Fish and Game Association has done an excellent job of contructing and maintaining this footpath which winds through scenic areas of deep hardwood forests carpeted with ferns and provides access for anglers and hikers nearly the entire length of the river.

The canyon section of the trail is especially spectacular with high cliffs rearing out of deep dark or boiling white water.

In contrast, the campsites at Stoltz Pool were full the entire weekend — although we managed to snare one end of a gravel bar for ourselves by heading up-Island on Friday evening.

At times the rough campsites at various spots along the river can become noisy with the clamor of radios or motorbikes, but silence is always only a few minutes away on the trail.

Unfortunately, little protection have been given this famed fishing stream, which should rank as one of our prime recreational resources.

Lake Cowichan's practice of dumping treated effluent into the top end of the river has caused a significant increase in the amount of downstream algae growth during the past few years. There is no doubt that the water meets Pollution Control Branch and Environmental Protection Agency standards — I determined that fact for myself having samples analyzed. But the now-slimy bottom and backwater "blooms" are not aesthetically appealing.

In addition, some portions of the river have been logged with little regard for visual impact and others are being carved up for residential use by speculators.

The B.C. Wildlife Federation pioneered the campaign for special status for rivers in British Columbia and specifically recommended the Cowichan be set aside as a recreational river.

And the Outdoor Recreation Council of British Columbia has stated:

"Productive stream fisheries are not common in the settled areas of British Columbia. The Cowichan River is particularly valuable because of the abundance and variety of desirable species."

But, despite promises by two provincial administrations, little has been done to preserve the values that remain.

Or, should I say, little specific has been accomplished.

The Park Act was ammended in fall of 1978 to allow the Parks Branch to administer land, trails, paths or waterways outside of designated parks.

I think the particular combination of trail and waterway along the Cowichan Valley would make an ideal pilot project for implementing this facet of the Parks Act.

NIBBLES: Skiers on the Island will have another area to head for when the snow flies this winter . . . Work is progressing at a rapid pace on Mt. Washington near Courtenay and the scheduled opening for operation this coming season will go ahead as planned . . . The chairlift towers were put into place by helicopter earlier this week and work on the road, sewer and water systems is nearing completion . . . Two parking lots are in place and work is continuing on a third . . . The other areas are Forbidden Plateau, Green Mountain and Mt. Arrowsmith . . . Now, with four ski areas within reach of shuttle bus service from Courtenay, Nanaimo and Port Alberni, respectively, isn't it about time a ski train service was set up on the E & N route? . . . It would be a welcome change from the two-to-three hour drive in each direction that most skiers on this end of Vancouver Island now face.

Tomsett, Danard finish with leaders

EDMONTON — Vancouver Island marksmen finished with the leaders in Tuesday's competition at the Canadian handgun championships.

Saanichton's Art Tomsett, a gold medallist at the recent Pan American Games, finished second in the air pistol competition while Trudy Danard of Victoria managed a third in women's centrefire shooting.

Richard Horne of Toronto, scoring 565, finished ahead of Tomsett (553) in the sharpshooter class.

Yellowknife's Karen Bannister (552) and runnerup Janice Woynarowich of Regina (532) both finished ahead of Danard in the women's competition. Danard also scored 532 but was placed third on the countback.

Other major winners Tuesday included Steve Collins of Tonawanda, N.Y. (centrefire) and Darius Young of Edmonton (rapidfire).

In the teams standard pistol competition, British Columbia came first at 2,213, Alberta was second with a 2,212 and Ontario had 2,199.

Rapidfire and team trials continue today.

Swann has had enough; Krause gets record shot

By Associated Press

Lynn Swann says he's had enough of professional football and Paul Krause is taking another shot at it.

Those were the major developments in the National Football League Tuesday as teams readied for the first full weekend of pre-season games. The action begins Thursday with St. Louis at Houston and Minnesota at Seattle.

Swann, the all-pro wide receiver and star for three NFL champions in his five seasons with Pittsburgh Steelers, claimed he was retiring at 27.

"You're trying to get me to say there's a possibility of my changing my mind," Swann told the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette when asked of his planned retirement. "I told you how I felt. I've retired."

The Steelers weren't so sure.

"I fully expect Swann will play with the Steelers this year," said a team spokesman.

Swann is in San Francisco, where he, two brothers and a cousin are suing the city of San Francisco for $2 million, alleging false arrest, false imprisonment, assault, battery and "emotional disturbances due to racial slurs."

The action stems from an incident in January 1974 when, Swann claims, a police officer broke Swann's watch and beat him and his companions around the knees with a nightstick.

The trial opened in San Francisco superior court July 16.

Swann had his best season in 1978 with 61 receptions for 880 yards and 11 touchdowns.

Krause, meanwhile, was beaten out of his starting position last season with Minnesota Vikings by Tom Hannon. The 16-year veteran safety needs just one interception to tie Emlen Tunnell's NFL career record of 79. He was asking for a guaranteed contract and the Vikes were unwilling to give him one. Since there's not much demand for 37-year-old safeties, it was unlikely Krause's demands would be met elsewhere.

But the Vikes and Krause reached agreement on a one-year pact Tuesday and the defensive back should get his shot at the record books.

Elsewhere in pre-season camps, Oakland coach Tom Flores announced that quarterback Ken Stabler, who reported to training camp a week late after asking to be traded, would start Saturday against Los Angeles.

Farmer sweep settles issue

Farmer Construction, a dominant force in past years, is back as the power in the Senior Amateur Baseball League again.

Farmers clinched first place Tuesday by sweeping a pair of decisions from Capital Radiators at Lambrick Park. Farmers scored a 13-10 victory in completing a suspended game and then carried on for a 6-1 win in the regular matchup.

The results moved Farmers 2½ games ahead of Lumberworld (nee Gorge Hotel), which dominated league play the previous four seasons.

Playing-coach Mike Baier belted two hits, including a homer, to provide the spark in the regular game while George Pakos' eighth homer decided the suspended game in the 10th inning.

B.C. juniors repeat feat

LONDON, Ont. — British Columbia defeated Ontario for the second time in about 48 hours Tuesday — but a distance of about 2,500 miles separated the sites of the junior men's basketball games.

B.C., which downed Ontario 68-59 Sunday to win the inaugural West Coast Classic at the University of Victoria, repeated the feat by tripping the same club 91-82 in the opening game of the four-team Ned Early tournament.

Gord Herbert of Penticton led the B.C. squad with 23 points, Mike Jackel of Burnaby added 22 and Doug Kelsey of Vancouver contributed 20. Tom Cholock topped Ontario marksmen with 26.

Jackel also scored 17 points to lead B.C. to a 72-56 decision over Philadelphia Blazers, a high school entry, during a second game.

Ontario won its second match 115-66 over Nova Scotia. Nova Scotia also split its opening matches by defeating Philadelphia, 79-72.

In women's play, Ontario downed B.C. 68-56 and Buffalo defeated Kitchener-Cambridge, 65-48.

The finals are scheduled for Thursday.

Last-inning rally topples Triangle

PRINCE GEORGE — Dunbar of Vancouver rallied with four runs in the last inning Tuesday to edge Triangle of Victoria 7-6 at the British Columbia Little League baseball championship tournament.

The loss drops Triangle into the losers' bracket of the double-loss elimination tourney.

Dunbar advances to the title game.

A two-out double by Trevor Thomas scored runners from second and third to cap the seventh-inning Dunbar rally.

The teams were tied 3-3 after the regulation six innings, but Triangle appeared to have the game won in the top of the seventh when Dan Ruttan and Murray Bailey drove in runs and Ruttan scored another on a passed ball.

Winning-pitcher David Vincent's double scored two in the bottom of the seventh, cutting the Victoria club's lead to 6-5.

The next batter walked, setting up Thomas's game-winning blast. Thomas finished the game with three RBIs and three hits in four at-bats.

Triangle meets Victoria Drive of Vancouver today, with the winner playing Trail in the B final Thursday.

Trail advanced to the B final by routing Jaycee-Rotary of North Vancouver 7-0 in Tuesday's only other game. Winning pitcher Barry Parisotto struck out 11 and didn't give up a walk while allowing just three hits.

Losing-pitcher Barry Lowe and relievers Shane Cable and Shawn Reilly gave up five hits, but combined to give up eight walks.

North Vancouver joins Ladysmith, Freeman Park of Prince George, Dawson Creek and defending Canadian champion Whalley on the sidelines.

The winner of the tournament, which ends Friday, moves on the Canadian championship in Lethbridge, Alta., starting Aug. 11.

Don, Derrick spark Saanich

NANAIMO — Don Nichol and Derrick Gelaude came up with supreme efforts Tuesday to help Saanich Evening Optimists stay alive in the British Columbia Babe Ruth (14-15) baseball championship tournament.

Saanich posted a 6-0 win over Prince George in the losers' bracket of the double-loss elimination tourney.

Nichol threw a no-hitter while facing two more batters than the minimum. He struck out seven and walked two, one of whom was caught in a double play.

Gelaude, meantime, continued his hot hitting with three hits in four trips to the plate, including an inside-the-park home run, to score twice and drive in two runs. Gelaude now has a 10-for-15 record in the past four games.

Scott Smith helped out at bat with a two-for-three performance and scored once.

It was the second straight error-free game for Saanich, which faces Vancouver Inter-Community in another losers' bracket game today. The winner advances to face unbeaten Trail at 6 p.m.

Racing for Admiral's Cup is yachting's world event

COWES, England (Reuter) — More than 50 yachts from four continents are trying to wrest the Admiral's Cup from the British team, winners of the yachting event in 1975 and 1977.

Nineteen countries, including Canada, have each sent a three-yacht team to Cowes on the Isle of Wight for the event, which started today and is generally recognized as the world championship of ocean racing.

Newcomers to the five-race event this year are Singapore, but the strongest challenges to the British title-holders are expected from the United States, Australian and West German crews.

Other teams competing this year are from Argentina, Belgium, Brazil, France, Hong Kong, Ireland, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, Poland, Spain, Sweden and Switzerland.

The yachts, the largest worth about $330,000, compete in inshore racing and two longer races for the gold Admiral's Cup. Success or failure depends not only on the speed and handling of the yachts but on the seamanship and stamina of the helmsmen, sail-trimmers and navigators among the crews.

The contest begins with an inshore race from the Isle of Wight up the Solent waterway. There is a similar 30-mile race the next day before competitors get their first taste of the open sea in the 225-mile cross-channel race.

The third inshore race, the Champagne Trophy, takes place Aug. 7 with an added incentive — the sponsors are giving the winning skipper his weight in champagne.

The toughest event starts Saturday — the Fastnet race, a 605-mile course round the southwest tip of England to Faastnet Rock off southern Ireland. After four days' sailing through waters famous for foul tides, high winds and poor visibility, the winner of the cup will be known when the yachts cross the finish at Plymouth.

Points for the Channel race count double and those for the Fastnet race are trebled, so the winner of the cup is almost inevitably the team that does best in the Fastnet race.

Britain has won the cup seven times in the 11-year history of the event, the only other winners being the U.S. (twice), West Germany and Australia.

Captain of the British team is former prime minister Edward Heath, who took time off from high office to lead the team to victory in 1971.

The U.S. challenge is led by David Allen in Imp, the yacht that scored the highest individual points in 1977. Imp is backed up by Seymour Sinette's Williwaw, a respected vessel with a top-class crew.

Ireland never has won the cup but nine boats fought out the Trials to produce a star team, and Hugh Coveney's Golden Apple of The Sun is expected to do well.

West Germany's bid to regain the cup, which they lost in 1975, is spearheaded by two well-known figures at Cowes, Niels Lorck-Schierning in Jan Pott and Hans-Otto Schuemann in Rubin.

Australia's team is captained by Syd Fischer in Ragamuffin, with two other boats chosen in a rigorous nine-race selection process. The team is optimistic, particularly since Ragamuffin, which took third place in the team, is the sisteiyacht of Williwaw, one of the stars of the U.S. team.

For the fourth consecutive time France is fielding Jean-Louis Fabry's Revolution, a successful combination expected to put up a good individual performance even if the team cannot better the sixth place it earned in 1977.

In two weekend practice races, Magistri was the only Canadian yacht to finish both runs, in 20th place in the first and 30th of a field of about 60 in the second.

Pachena, owned by John Newton of Vancouver, was dismasted in the second race and Evergreen's dagger-board was damaged after she ran aground twice. Both damaged yachts were repaired Tuesday.

Evelyn captures Oak Bay berth

Evelyn Leahey defeated Gladys Willits to capture the Oak Bay club berth in the upcoming Vancouver Island women's Champion of Champions singles lawn bowling competition.

Irene Carruthers collected the club novice title and the Amy Crawford Cup by downing Jacques Whiteoak.

Stockers take opening game

An effective pitching performance by Kathy Hawley helped the favored Stocker North Americans to strike the first blow in the best-of-three Victoria Senior Women's Softball League's championship series.

Hawley, striking out only two by enjoying exeecellent control by not walking a batter, fashioned a three-hitter as Stockers defeated Dryco Breakers 6-2 at Hyacinth Park Tuesday.

Marilyn Hickman scored a pair of runs for the regular-season champions while Sandy Ferguson belted two hits to spark the offense.

Sharon Ferrill came up with a three-hit shutout as Capital City Pirates blanked Strathcona Stingers 8-0 in the opening of the consolation series. Ferrill struck out nine, walked none.

Ross Swanton pounded out two home runs and Dave Sandy spaced four hits as Ingraham Hotel tripped Remco Office Systems 4-1 in Heywood Men's League action.

Strathcona belted Esquimalt Rebels 10-5 in Macdonald Men's League play while Strandlund Brothers of the Stuffy McGinnis League edged Hermsen Construction of the Sidney League 3-2 in an exhibition at Central Park.

Involvement one name for Games

Participation . . . or perhaps it should be involvement . . . is the other name of the game that goes by the official title of the British Columbia Summer Games, which open at Richmond Thursday evening.

The actual competition begins Friday morning and runs for three days.

The participation factor is that 3,500 athletes from all parts of the province will contest a myriad of sports.

The involvement is that before the last event is held an estimated 105,000 British Columbians of all ages will have had something to do with the event as competitor . . . playdown or Games official . . . volunteer worker . . . or just plain parent or relative.

The organization is that far-reaching.

After the final Games contestants have been selected, the provincial government takes care of most expenses — travel . . . accomodation . . . feeding.

And that is a massive undertaking.

Although an estimated one-fifth of the participants fall into the "over 19 years of age and living in the lower mainland" category and will therefore not require breakfasts or dinners, the logistics of feeding other athleres are nonetheless staggering.

For example, chairman Ron Butlin says the grocery list alone for looking after the athletes would boggle the average housewife.

Such as: 22,00 eggs, 38,000 pounds of vegetables, 1,600 pounds of meat, 450 pounds of sausages, 700 pounds of cheese, 1,400 loaves of bread, 3,500 litres of milk, 3,500 litres of juice and 14,000 cans of soft drinks.

Meals will be served in two sittings in two schools, Richmond High and Palmer Junior High.

A total of 12 schools as well as the Workers Compensation building for wheelchair athletes will be used to house the participants with the organizing and servicing handled mainly by volunteers.

Travel is as great an undertaking and all available transportation will be pressed into service to keep the athletes on schedule and looked after.

For instance, athletes, upon arrival from out of town, will be transported to accomodation sites, will be picked up later for the barbecue feast and opening ceremonies, returned to their quarters, and then picked up again in time for breakfast . . . and so on through the weekend.

Fun-time recreation is also included under transportation needs.

Athletes will be able to attend social functions such as a disco dance, pool party, jazz group and classical concert.

The transportation schedule will have to encompass 13 accomodation sites, 18 sport sites, five special-event sites and two meal sites until the last flight for home for the athletes leaves Sunday night.

And how to find out where the people are has also been taken care of.

An elaborate computer system, donated by the Richmond Credit Union, will be used to facilitate registration of the athletes and, once the information is stored into the computer's memory banks — presto! Want to find an athlete? Simply push a button and there he (or she) is.

Butlin says there are about 1,600 volunteers working on the Games in the Richmond area.

Butlin also said that, in terms of numbers, the gathering of athletes will be Canada's largest with the exclusion of the 1976 Olympic Games in Montreal.

Certainly it will be the largest gathering of athletes in one place at one time in the history of the province.

Reason for the increase in numbers from last year is that the Games format was changed this year from that in effect in Penticton in 1978.

At Penticton, two groups of 1,500 athletes came to town for two days each. That resulted in two opening ceremonies and no closing ceremonies and a certain amount of confusion. This year everyone is being brought in together.

As for the events, the Games include archery, baseball, canoeing, cricket, cycling, ladies and men's field hockey, ladies and men's golf, horseshoe pitching, lacrosse, ladies and men's lawn bowling, modern pentathlon, rowing, rugby, sailing, shooting, soccer, men's and women's softball, swimming, synchronized swimming, tennis, track and field, water polo, water skiing, and wheelchair sports.

And it all starts Thursday with opening ceremonies in Minoru Park at 7 p.m.

Players work on image

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Basketball Association Players' Association, concerned that the public thinks all athletes are selfish money-grubbers, has announced a program intended to change that conception.

It's called the Give Something Back — NBA Players and People Day. The program, scheduled for Aug. 11 at the National Tennis Centre in Flushing Meadow Park, calls for four events involving current and former NBA players.

They include a basketball clinic, some NBA players playing tennis before lacing up their basketball sneakers for an old-timers game and an All-Star game.

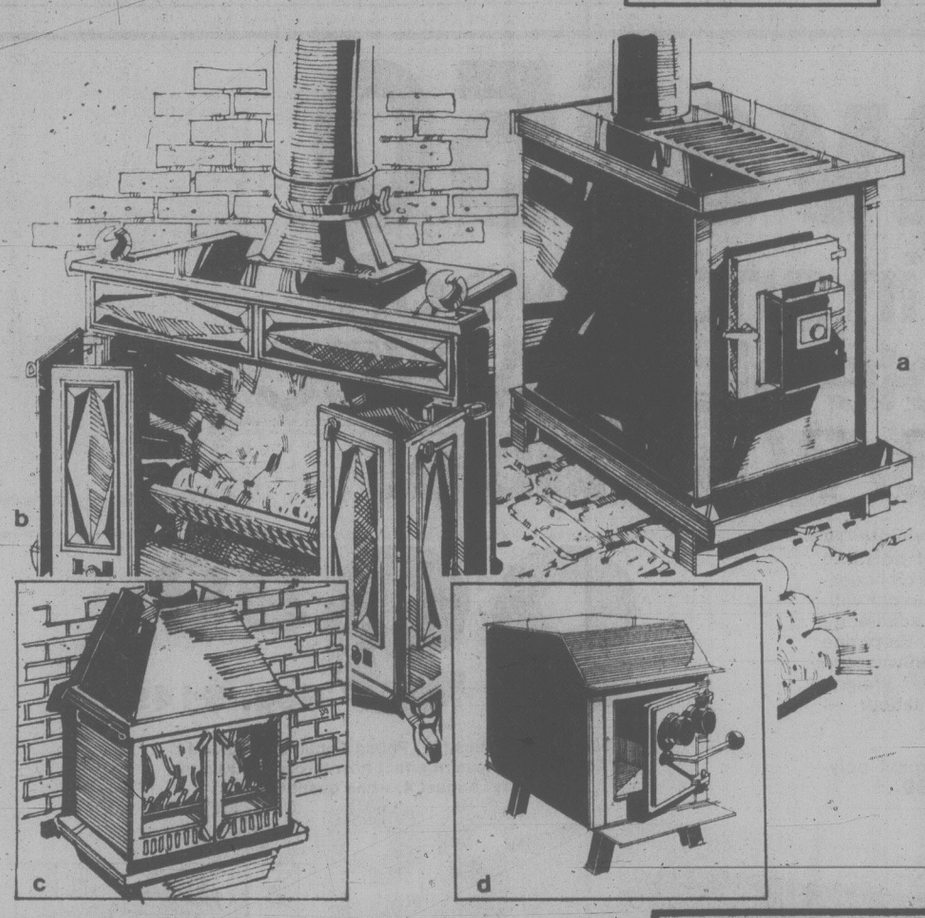

The organizers of the outing, speaking at a news conference, said they have lined up former greats Oscar Robertson, John Havlicek, Dave DeBusschere, Cazzie Russell and, possibly, Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey. Some of the current stars expected to be on hand will be Julius Erving, Bob Lanier, Maurice Lucas, Earl Monroe and Nate Archibald.

Proceeds from the affair will go to the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation and to help support Opportunities Industrialization Centres (OIC) in their minority training programs.

"Basketball has been very good to a lot of minority people," said Willis Reed, former player and coach with New York Knicks. "This is a chance to prove we are interested in the community."

Nina, Wendy advance

OTTAWA — Nina Bland and Wendy Barlow advanced to the third round but Nina's sister, Jennifer, the other Victorian entered, fell by the wayside during second-round matches Tuesday in the women's singles competition at the Canadian tennis championships.

Nina, seeded fifth, defeated Evelyne Hustwit of Ottawa 6-1, 6-0, second-ranked Barlow ousted Claire Lardner of Toronto 6-0, 6-2 and Jennifer dropped a 7-6, 6-3 decision to Nicole Marois of Quebec City.

First-seeded Marjorie Blackwood of Ottawa defeated Chantal Racicot of Vancouver 6-1, 6-3 and third seed Lise Senn of Toronto won 6-0, 3-6, 6-3 against Marcie Saifer of Winnipeg.

In other singles play, Helene Pelletier of Quebec City defeated Susan Black of Toronto 6-3, 6-2, Sue Pridham of Mississauga, Ont., defeated Suzanne Mathews of Vancouver 6-3, 4-6, 6-1 and unseeded Karen Dewis of London, Ont., defeated Gabrielle Slezak from British Columbia, 6-3, 6-2.

In men's singles play, first-seeded Rejean Genois of Quebec City was toppled 5-7, 6-3, 6-4 by Stephan Bonneau of Quebec City.

Seventh seed Glenn Michibata of Toronto was the only other of the 16 ranked men to lose in the second round, dropping a 6-4, 2-6, 6-3 decision to Bill Leigh of Toronto.

In other men's singles competition Harry Fritz of Toronto, second seeded and defending champion, defeated Martin Lachapelle of Montreal 6-1, 7-5 while Josef Brabenec of Vancouver defeated Christian Gingras of Quebec City 5-7, 6-2, 7-5 and Dale Power of Ottawa defeated David Stauble of Toronto, 6-1, 6-1.

Derek Segal of Toronto beat Walter Crane of Toronto 6-1, 6-2; Don McCormick defeated Dave Johnston in an all-Vancouver match 6-7, 6-3, 6-3 and Tony Bardsley of Vancouver defeated Ted Thompson, Ottawa, 6-4, 6-0.

In men's doubles competition the top-rated team of Genois and Legendre was upset by Paul O'Donoghue and Nick Mohtadi of Calgary 6-3, 6-4. Laird Dunlop of Vancouver and Christian Gingras of Quebec City defeated Stephan Bonneau of Quebec and Jean-Guy Cossette of Quebec City 4-6, 6-3, 6-3 and third-seeded Fritz and Brabenec of Toronto defeated George Kylar and Dennis Ing of Edmonton, 6-2, 6-1.

In the women's doubles, the top-seeded team of Marois and Pelletier defeated Pam Gollish and Claire Lardner of Toronto 6-7, 6-1, 6-0 while second-seeded Blackwood and Lise Senn of Toronto defeated the Toronto pair of Diane Dimmer and Sally Coles, 6-1, 6-1.

Askew, Keith on B.C. team

Two players from the Lower Island Youth Soccer Association have been selected to the British Columbia under-16 squad taking part in the Western Canada inter-provincial championship tournament Sept. 7-9 in Burnaby's Swangard Stadium.

Paul Askew of Gorge FC and Adam Keith of Lansdowne Evening Optimists, both current members of the Lower Island Under-16 Selects, were chosen for the provincial side.

The winner of the Western Canada title advances to the Canadian finals Sept. 22.

Third game Thursday

G&W Landscaping and Esquimalt Universal Sheet Metal square off Thursday in the third and deciding game of their best-of-three Vamcouver Island Senior "B" Lacrosse League playoff semi-final series.

Game time is 8 p.m. at Pearkes Arena.

The winner will meet Victoria Athletics in the best-of-three final starting Monday at the same site.

Transfer approved

CP Rail strike threat

EDMONTON (CP) — The Brotherhood of Railway, Airline and Steamship Clerks will try to shut down all CP Rail traffic in Canada if the company does not respond to a union request to resume negotiations.

Dennis Onsychuk, general Edmonton chairman for the union, whose members are on strike against CP Express, said Tuesday the brotherhood will propose another meeting with management for this week.

"If there is no response we intend to take stricter action and ask for total support of our fellow union members," Onyschuk said.

Employees at CP Transport, CP Rail, inter-modual services which operate the railway's piggyback and container systems and Smith's Transport are also members of the brotherhood.

Onsychuk said the union will ask the other members to walk off their jobs in support of the CP Express workers, who have been on strike for more than three weeks.

The 3,000 freight handlers across the country, without a contract since Dec. 31, 1978, walked off the job after a disagreement over a cost-of-living clause and compounding of increases over the 36-month contract they are seeking.

Opposition critics call for immediate start at Rupert

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition critics called on the government Tuesday to "get cracking" on an immediate start on construction of a superport at Prince Rupert.

Spokesmen for the Liberal and New Democratic parties said the government is too slow with development of grain facilities considered essential for quicker movement of Canadian grain to export markets.

They made their statements after Transport Minister Don Mazankowski announced a memorandum of agreement had been signed for construction of the new grain facilities and evaluation of a site will start immediately.

He said construction, expected to cost between $100 million and $125 million, should start next year and take up to four years. The grain facilities would be only part of other facilities that eventually were to make Prince Rupert into a superport for bulk commodities such as grain and coal.

"We don't need any more evaluations," said NDP critic Les Benjamin of Regina West.

He understood the National Harbors Board (NHB) had almost completed a plan for the Ridley Island site, one of two being considered.

Mazankowski told a news conference that a six-man site evaluation team must study both Ridley Island and Casey Point on Kaien Island before he decides in November which location will best serve as a new grain terminal.

Benjamin said the NHB has favored Ridley Island because it has envisaged the grain facility paying for coal and bulk commodities at that site.

"The minister should make up his mind quickly and allow construction to start."

Liberal transport critic Ed Lumley (Stormont Dundas) agreed with Benjamin and said the NHB plan should be implemented now.

"I don't understand why they haven't proceeded at Ridley," he said. "Unless they've got some new information about Kaien Island."

Mazankowski said the federal government will share the terminal's site preparation costs with a consortium of western grain elevator companies and will provide the Pacific Coast port with improved railway service to meet its expected export capacity of 150 million bushels a year.

Mazankowski has indicated a super port is still much on his mind, but told reporters that further expansion to accomodate coal, potash, forest products and other bulk exports will require more discussions with the industries involved.

"We want to get the grain terminal on stream because it is urgent and is required and every day that we lose . . . the farmers lose $2 million," he said.

A decision on the terminal's eventual location will be made by Nov. 30. It will have a capacity of eight million bushels.

Mazankowski said the federal government will share site preparation costs with the consortium and will provide the Pacific Coast port with improved railway service to meet its expected export capacity of 150 million bushels a year.

The consortium — Cargill Canada Ltd., United Grain Growers, Alberta Wheat Pool, Pioneer Grain and the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool — will build the elevator through a financing arrangement with the Alberta government.

Both Benjamin and Lumley also said the government should immediately buy more hopper cars.

Meanwhile, Mazankowski's announcement was greeted with enthusiasm in Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Hugh Horner, Alberta's economic development minister, said he was "very pleased" Ottawa had reached agreement with the grain companies involved, and George Davidson, spokesman for the Alberta Grain Commission, voiced similar sentiments.

Saskatchewan agricultural leaders also spoke enthusiastically Tuesday about the prospect of a new grain terminal at Prince Rupert, but cautioned that the current grain tie-ups won't end without co-operation from the national railways.

Magazines to merge October 27

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canada's two largest weekend magazines, The Canadian and Weekend, will merge Oct. 27, according to Lewis Louthood, publisher of Weekend.

The new magazine, to be called Canadian Weekend, will be published by a company owned by FP Publications Ltd., Southam Inc. and Toronto Star Newspapers Ltd, he added.

In a statement, Louthood said Canadian Weekend will be Canada's largest-circulation magazine, with an expected final circulation of from 2.5 million to three million.

Louthood said the merger will reduce the present operating deficits of the two magazines, while offering major cost savings to advertisers.

Gordon Pape, publisher of The Canadian, has been appointed publisher of the new magazine. Current circulation of The Canadian is just under two million, while Weekend has a circulation of 1.7 million.

The new magazine is scheduled initially to appear in a number of newspapers, including Vancouver Sun, Victoria Times, Edmonton Journal, Calgary Herald, Winnipeg Free Press, Winnipeg Tribune, Windsor Star, Brantford Expositor, Hamilton Spectator, Toronto Star and Ottawa Citizen.

"We expect most current readers of either Weekend or The Canadian will continue to receive a newspaper magazine and that by bringing the two publications together we can offer them a superior editorial product," Pape said.

Louthood said distribution in Montreal has yet to be arranged but is estimated to be 200,000. The new magazine will be printed by rotogravure at the Montreal plant of Montreal Standard Inc.

Pape said negotiations to add circulation are under way with several independent newspapers, including many current carriers of The Canadian or Weekend.

He said the decision to merge the publications was made to put Canada's newspaper-distributed magazines on a sound economic footing for the next decade.

"Both Weekend and The Canadian had experienced falling advertising linage and rising deficits for several years," Pape said.

"Fortunately, advertising linage in both publications has turned around dramatically in 1979 — our latest reports show linage gains of over 26 per cent with issue closed to early September.

"This renewed advertiser interest, coupled with continued excellent reader response to newspaper magazines, convinced us that the time was right for a move that would guarantee the long-term health and stability of the publication."

Magnamedia, the sales organization that represents both magazines plus their French-language counterpart, Perspectives, will handle the advertising for the new publication, at rates that will be announced shortly.

Court blocks bias probe

OTTAWA (CP) — The Federal Court of Canada Tuesday rejected a government attempt to block a Human Rights Commission investigation into charges of discrimination against the revenue department.

Associate Chief Justice A. L. Thurlow said the commission had not exceeded its authority when it appointed a tribunal to investigate complaints that the Income Tax Act discriminates against single fathers and common-law spouses.

T.B. Smith, lawyer for the attorney-general, had argued that the commission had no authority to challenge income tax laws passed by an act of Parliament.

Mr. Justice Thurlow said the courts could intervene at this stage only if it was clear the tribunal did not have the jurisdiction under the Human Rights Act to look into the cases.

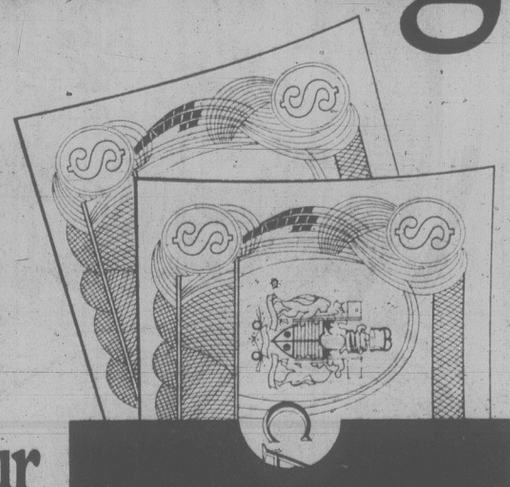

The court had also been asked to define whether the collection of taxes was "a service . . . customarily available to the general public." To deny such a service is considered discrimination under the Human Rights Act.

Mr. Justice Thurlow said it is up to the tribunal to consider that question.

Commission lawyer Russell Juriansz said the tribunal hearing is scheduled Thursday. The government may still appeal the federal court's decision.

Four persons have filed complaints with the commission.

U.S. promises reasonableness on registering

OTTAWA (CP) — American officials will be reasonable with Canadians who miss today's deadline to register land they hold in the United States, the U.S. embassy said today.

The embassy released a prepared statement from Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland giving the assurance a day before the deadline.

American officials have already acknowledged that they were lax in informing Canadians of the new land registration law which is designed to show how much agriculture and forest land is in foreign hands.

The law says that holders of land used for forestry, agriculture or timber production in the last five years must register with county officials. Holdings of less than an acre that produced less than $1,000 in annual gross sales need not be reported. The law does not apply to building lots and residential property of Canadians residing in the U.S.

There has been concern that Canadian owners of recreation land, for example owners of a wooded acre or two, might face penalties because they failed to register under a law they did not know existed.

Failure to register by the deadline can result in a fine equal to 25 per cent of the value of the property. But Bergland said in his statement his department "will be reasonable in applying penalties" to some foreign owners who miss the deadline.

Buddhists open college

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — A Buddhist college will open in September at Brock University, the first college of its kind in Canada, university officials say.

The Karma Buddhist College, which will be associated with Brock but not affiliated, will be a teaching centre and the North American home for the Karma Kargyu Society, a Buddhist group.

When it opens, the college will provide instruction for a highly-disciplined residential community of about 30 students and to some non-resident students.

All members of the Buddhist college will have to be fully registered Brock students who will combine regular academic studies with Buddhist teachings and meditation.

"A student is no farther ahead at the end of his degree than the day he started if he has not developed as a whole person," said Dr. John Mayer, a member of the department of comparative philosophy and vice-president of the Karma Kargyu Society.

"Those who involve themselves with the Buddhist teachings find it a liberating thing," he said. "It is a self-discovering component."

It is hoped that the college, which won't draw upon the university for any financial aid, will eventually build a monastery outside St. Catharines, Mayer said. The monastery would house Buddhist monks teaching at the college.

Water shot from RCMP mobile unit blows apart fake bomb

As a musical ride it's sure to bomb

OTTAWA (CP) — This member of the RCMP will never mount a horse for the Musical Ride but will always get his bomb.

The RCMP addition is the Remote Mobile Investigator (RMI), a six-wheeled unit developed to counteract the rising tide of bombings, force technicians said.

Bill Hay, a technical consultant for the force's Bomb Data Centre, said the RMI is the result of three years of research and described it as the best remotely-operated bomb disposal unit ever produced.

"Even the Americans have not developed an equivalent piece of machinery," he said in an interview.

"This will do the job, do it well and at half the cost (of other units)."

The 1.5 metre-long RMI costs about $13,000 and looks like an astronaut's lunar rover equipped with a 12-gauge shotgun, a TV camera and a neutrex — super water pistol that shoots a high-velocity stream of water capable of blowing a bomb apart before it can detonate.

The best British unit is the Wheelbarrow, a tank-like unit that is frequently used in Northern Ireland and would cost $30,000 to manufacture here. It also is produced in the United States.

During a demonstration in the parking lot of the RCMP's security policy section, a technician 30 metres away from the RMI put it through its paces.

As it whirred to a halt in front of a plastic lunch box, the unit lowered its long metal arm and aimed the neutrex at the container.

A loud bang ripped the air as 100 millilitres of super-compressed water shattered the lunch box and the fake bomb it contained. Hay said it could do the same to a metal canister.

The unit also can be equipped with four different types of arms, a laser aiming device for a high-powered rifle, an x-ray scanner to peer inside bombs, a stethoscope to hear timers tick, a tear gas grenade launcher, a spotlight and a mirror and flare arrangement to blind snipers.

He said RMI has never been used to neutralize a real bomb but was used to dispose of several suspected devices at the Commonwealth Games in Edmonton last year. They were all fakes.

Not all bomb threats are hoaxes. Of the 624 incidents involving explosives between 1974 and 1978, 85 were successful bombing attacks and three persons died.

The object is to match the official letters published every day with the letters in the grid which you have filled in with your name (see samples 1 and 2). When you have circled a row of letters across, vertically, or diagonally either way, send your entry in for the bi-weekly draw for cash prizes. You may submit as many entries as you wish per game, but each must be in a separate envelope.

THE NAME GAME
Rules and Procedures

Object of "The Name Game": To become eligible for prize drawings by matching letters of the alphabet, published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, with the letters in your name. Each game starts with a Saturday Times and ends in the Sunday Colonist two weeks later. The official entry form will be published every day. All members of a family may play. There is no age limit. You may enter more than once but only one entry per envelope may be submitted. As each game ends, you are invited to play the next game.

1. Using the official entry form or a reasonably hand-drawn facsimile (no mechanically reproduced forms accepted), start at the upper left hand corner and print your name continuously, one letter in each square, until all the squares are filled in. (For example, if your name is John Anderson, Sample 1 shows how to fill out your entry form.) Do not include punctuation.
Use your legal name, in a form which can be verified on your driver's licence, social security card or other official identification. You may use various forms of your first name (e.g. John, Jonathan or John S.), as long as your identity can be verified. No nicknames, please.
2. Letters for the Name Game will be published as follows: 4 letters Saturday Times and Sunday Colonist and 3 letters daily. When an official letter matches one in your diagram, circle it on your entry. That letter may appear in more than one square on your diagram, but you may circle only one such letter (of your choice) each time. Since individual letters are selected at random, they may appear more than once — even on the same day. You may circle one such letter as many times as that letter is published. The same letters will be published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, but may only be used once in any one entry.
3. When you match enough letters to complete one row on your diagram — horizontal, vertical or diagonal (corner to corner), as in Sample 2, you are eligible for the prize drawings for that game. Drawings for 15 prizes will be held every other week for 10 weeks. At each drawing $500 goes to the first name drawn, $100 to the next —, $50 each to the next 3, and $25 for the last 10 — (Winners must answer a time-limited skill-testing question before collecting prizes.) All names drawn will be returned to the drum for the grand prize drawing.
4. Mail your completed entry form to: The Name Game, Victoria Press, P.O. Box 1390, Victoria, B.C. V8W 3C4; postmarked no later than the Monday following the end of that game. Completed entries may also be delivered, in a sealed envelope, to Victoria Press, no later than Tuesday, the following day. The game number (such as 'Game 1', 'Game 2', etc.) must appear at the lower left-hand corner of the envelope.
5. All entries will be placed in a container and the winning entries will be drawn at random. Winners will be announced in the Colonist and Times on the Friday following the close of each game. The odds of winning will depend on the number of eligible entries received.
6. It is not necessary to buy the Times or Colonist to participate. Copies of the newspaper may be inspected free of charge at the newspaper's offices during regular business hours. Sorry, official letters will not be given over the phone.
7. Employees of the newspapers and members of their immediate families are not eligible to participate. Unclaimed or invalidly claimed prizes will be donated to a recognized charity at the close of the contest.
8. Winners agree to allow publication of their names, pictures and publicity in the Times and Colonist without additional consideration. Submission of an entry indicates acceptance of all game rules.
9. Decisions of Victoria Press judges in all matters relating to the The Name Game will be final.

Housing policy 'helps rich'

By JIM ROBB
FP News Service

OTTAWA — If the Clark government is sincerely interested in equitable treatment for all taxpayers it might heed the latest criticism of federal housing policies from the Canadian Council on Social Development.

The council, which has been an active critic of government social policies for more than 50 years, claims that the existing tax shelter schemes hatched by the former Liberal government look at the impact of existing commit a number of social errors.

They "discourage young homeowners and small property investors, result in the loss of tax revenue, and provide few tax benefits to low and middle-income earners," the council says in a new report.

Before Finance Minister John Crosbie introduces the Conservative campaign promise of income tax deductions for mortgage interest and property tax payments in his first budget the cabinet could take a hard residential tax shelters and where the benefits go.

The council report says they are of most benefit to those who can use all of them simultaneously and can afford to pay for the expert advice needed to take full advantage of the goodies.

The council points out that individual tax payers benefit from the untaxed capital gains that can be realized on the sale of a principal residence as well as from tax exempt savings plans that allow potential home buyers to accumulate down payments.

These tax benefits, however, are not equitably distributed among all Canadians who want to invest in housing.

The man who hasn't got enough funds to invest in future housing loses out completely on the tax shelter. He then loses even more because he pays full tax on all earnings while his neighbor with money to invest gets a reduced tax load.

"The tax system helps to keep this taxpayer part of the working poor," the council says.

Participation by well-heeled Canadians in tax shelters also beggars the federal treasury because less revenue comes in. That means, ultimately, there are fewer subsidy programs or tax breaks for low-income families.

The council claims the working poor get hosed on rental accommodation because "if the working poor want to occupy newer housing units produced with the assistance of tax sheltered investment, they may end up paying a prime rate for rental housing. . . ."

Fair sex trials out in villages

EDMONTON (CP) — City lawyer Ron Berger successfully argued Tuesday that an impartial jury and fair trial on sex charges are practically unobtainable in Alberta's small towns.

Justice Tevie Miller of Court of Queen's Bench accepted Berger's argument and ordered the trial of Berger's client moved to Edmonton from Vegreville, a farm centre about 90 kilometres to the east.

Mr. Justice Miller also accepted Berger's argument there should be separate trials for the two charges laid against the young defendant — rape and having sexual intercourse with a girl under 14.

Berger said the charges are virtually identical except that rape involves intercourse without consent. He said if the accused admitted intercourse but argued for the sake of the rape charge that the girl had given consent, he would automatically be admitting guilt on the other charge.

Berger asked for the change of location on grounds that information travels quickly in small farming communities.

Academics mourn loss of specialist on North

EDMONTON (CP) — The weekend death of Dr. Don Gill, an internationally respected expert on the Canadian North, leaves the academic community with a large gap to fill, say colleagues.

Gill, 44, an expert on ecosystems in the Canadian North, was killed Saturday in a two-car crash near Peace River, Alta.

At the time of the accident he was on his way to the Northwest Territories to begin a major government research project on eco-systems in the Mackenzie River basin.

The University of Alberta geography professor was director of the Boreal Institute for Northern Studies from 1973 to 1976, and published more than 60 major papers and several books on the North.

"He was a man of considerable research acumen," Dr. Ian Campbell, geography department chairman, said today. "We'll be very hard put to replace him."

Born in northern Michigan the son of a trapper and hunting guide, Gill moved to Canada in 1965 and took his doctorate degree at the University of British Columbia.

He joined the University of Alberta in 1968 as a bio-geographer and became a Canadian citizen several years later. He became a full professor in 1977 and was also an instructor at the university's Arctic summer school.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Larry Gill of Amasa, Mich., his wife and two children.

Ads in, lobbyist out for worried PSAC

QUEBEC (CP) — The Public Service Alliance of Canada (PSAC) decided against hiring a Parliamentary lobbyist Tuesday, favoring instead a direct appeal to the public through an advertising campaign.

One delegate, stating a minority position, said the public service union should hire a full-time employee "whose sole duty should be to contact members of Parliament and pound it into their stupid heads that we want some action in Parliament."

Bill Doherty, vice-president of the PSAC, said a lobbyist would be of little value because it is almost impossible to convince individual MPs to take a stand in opposition to their party position.

The 180,000-member alliance also decided to spend a million dollars in the next three years on more union representatives to protect members against layoff threats.

"Our union must prepare for positive and aggressive action to meet the challenge of maintaining the continuing high level of service our members provide to the Canadian public and protect the traditional and legal rights of our members," said Doherty, chairman of the union's finance committee.

"Adequate finances are the sinews of action."

A number of delegates to the PSAC national convention said they need more specialists in union affairs to help members combat the Conservative government proposal to reduce the public service by 60,000 in the next three years.

Apart from the threat to job security, the union must also find a way to accommodate embittered Quebec delegates, who lost a bid Monday to form a separate Quebec component within the PSAC.

Candidates for PSAC offices said at a Tuesday night meeting they would try to find the roots of the Quebec discontent and seek a solution.

At the opening of the all-candidates meeting, after vice-presidential candidate Jean Bergeron spoke in French, an anglophone delegate complained he had lost his translation device.

In a more light-hearted moment, a delegate complained there was no Canadian flag on the head platform in the convention hall. After a huge maple leaf flag was produced, Quebec delegates demanded — and got — an equally large Quebec provincial flag for the platform.

Butter sales keep skidding

Farming Report
By Leo Quigley

Canada's consumption of butter, besieged by the high technology of the vegetable oil-margarine trade, continues to decline.

Per capita, annual butter consumption has fallen from 7.28 kilograms per person in 1968 to 4.50 kilograms in 1978, and there are no signs the trend will change. In fact, indications are sales could hit a dismal 3.1 kilograms by 1983.

While a campaign to boost butter sales has recently been launched by Canadian dairy producers, shoppers who approach the dairy section at their local supermarkets are discouraged by price and their concerns about cholesterol intake.

Furthermore, they are encouraged to buy margarine because of its price and the fact that it has been improved tremendously in recent years. Not only does it taste more like butter, but the texture is far superior to the margarine of a decade ago.

In contrast to expected butter sales, per capita margarine sales have climbed from 3.9 kilograms 10 years ago to more than five kilograms by 1977. By 1983 they are expected to exceed seven kilograms per person.

As a spread, butter is plagued by several problems.

For one thing, it is made from industrial milk sold at government-regulated prices that don't respond to normal marketing pressures. This appars to be an unchangeable fact of life: dairy producers aren't about to abandon their milk marketing plan or the Canadian Dairy Commission.

Another problem is the fact that butter production results in an enormous quantity of skim milk powder for which there are limited markets. In fact, it costs the industry to rid itself of this surplus.

However, unlike price, this may be changeable. A move is now afoot in the industry to expand the white veal industry in eastern Canada, an entreprise that requires a sizeable amount of skim milk as calf feed.

Public worry about cholesterol intake — although disputed by the dairy industry as unfounded — may subside now that dairymen have armed themselves with research claiming a relationship between margarine consumption and the incidence of breast and colon cancer.

Finally, butter itself may change. While dairymen sell an essentially unadulterated product, research in Scotland has shown that the texture of butter can be altered by changing cattle feeding programs. In addition, there is the possibiliy of blending butter with vegetable oils.

Dairymen are divided on the potential of "butterine", but initial sales of the product in Saskatchewan and Nova Scotia — the two provinces that allow a butter-margarine mix — show promise.

Research conducted at the Hannah Research Institute in Ayr, Scotland, shows that slight adjustments in the diet of a cow will result in butter that can be spread as soon as it is taken out of the refrigerator. That means you use less butter.

The researchers found that the diets that result in the softest butter included soybean oil and grass, while grass silage diets produced hard butter suitable for the confectionary trade. They also found that Guernsey and Ayrshire breeds yielded the softest butter.

So, if hard butter is your problem, buy a Guernsey and feed it grass laced with soybean, Canola oil or sunflower seeds — the same sort of oils used in making margarin.

Retirement's fine, but. . .

ROCKY MOUNTAIN HOUSE, Alta. (CP) — Helen Hunley, Alberta's former social services minister, said Monday she enjoys her retirement from politics but would consider serving as lieutenant-governor if offered the job.

Miss Hunley was responding to news reports listing her among likely candidates for the position.

A spokesman for the prime minister's office in Ottawa said last week a short list of possible successors to Lt.-Gov. Ralph Steinhauer has been prepared but declined to release names on the list. However, a copy of the list was obtained and published by The Edmonton Journal.

Miss Hunley said she has not yet been approached.

Saskatoon theatre falling to wreckers

SASKATOON (CP) — The Capitol Theatre goes under the wrecking ball this summer after 50 years of providing entertainment to Saskatonians.

City council authorized a demolition permit Monday for the old vaudeville and movie house. An option to buy the theatre lot is held by Princeton Development Ltd. of Edmonton, whose representative John Ferguson called the theatre's downtown location an "ideal site."

Ferguson said the $20-million, twin-tower office and retail building his company plans to develop on the site "will revitalize the heart of downtown Saskatoon."

He said the company does not want to be a "villain" and will help the city preserve artifacts of historic value from the theatre and from the nearby Bank of Nova Scotia.

The bank has also been designated an historic building but would have to be cleared away, along with a number of other retail stores fronting on First Avenue and Second Avenue, to make way for the twin 10-storey towers. The first phase of the Princeton development would cover 225,000 square feet and be finished in two years.

Ferguson said his company will likely decide whether to exercise its option on the land by Sept. 1, but said purchase is likely.

Grain storing price up

REGINA (CP) — Producers will pay more for storing and cleaning grain next season, the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool announced Monday.

A news release from Pool General Manager Ira Mumford said the cost of storing grain in the 1979-80 crop year increases to two cents a tonne per day from 1.3 cents.

Noting the increase was the first in 20 years, Mumford said it won't generate enough money to cover the Pool's construction program. Elevation charges will remain the same, he said, and an increased volume of delivery should cover higher operating costs.

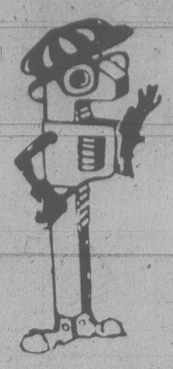

Higher costs in equipment and manpower mean cleaning charges will increase, he said. In the case of wheat, the increase is to $5 a tonne from $3. However, the charges include receiving, elevating and loading out charges that used to be added on to the cleaning tariff.

The cost of administering both consigned and producer cars increases by $15 and for terminal elevators, tariffs have been increased, on wheat for example to $3 a tonne from $2.50.

New job for Lang

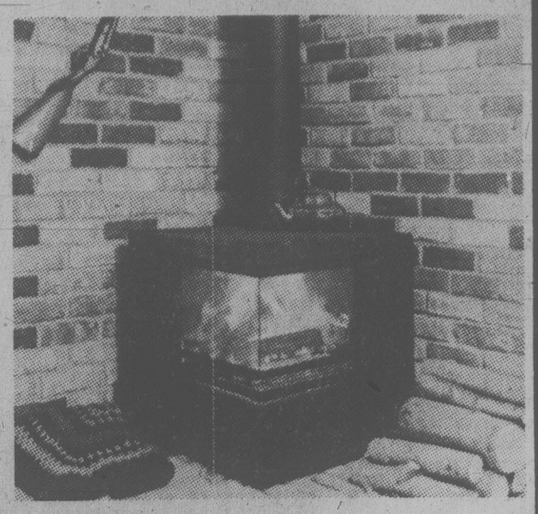

SASKATOON (CP) — Former federal transport minister Otto Lang begins a new job as vice-president of a grain firm next month, but despite a move to Winnipeg he says he won't be taking himself completely out of Saskatchewan plitics.

Lang, who was also minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board in Pierre Trudeau's Liberal government, will become an executive of Pioeer Grain Ltd. He lost a bid to retain his Saskatoon Humboldt seat when the government was defeated in the May 22 election.

Bungling robber backed by victim

EDMONTON (CP) — The victim of an inept robbery attempt in Hinton, Alta., last March wrote a letter supporting Anthony Clair's successful appeal in Alberta Supreme Court for a shorter sentence.

The two became good friends after the bungled attempt. Clair had his one-year jail sentence reduced to three months with 15 months probation.

Wearing masks, Clair, 18, of Hinton and an accomplice had tried to rob a service station. Clair started a fight with the station attendant while his accomplice was to have cleaned out the till.

But nothing went according to plans and Clair had to abandon the scuffle.

Mr. Justice A. F. Moir said Clair's accomplice "couldn't even get the money out of the cash register."

It was "a very inept attempt," Moir said.

Defence lawyer W. O. Robson said Clair is an excellent student with no previous criminal record and is well-regarded in the community, 280 kilometres west of Edmonton. RCMP officers handling the case said it would be a shame to put him in jail.

$40 million project

CANMORE, Alta. (CP) — The municipal planning commission has given Ashk Development Corp. Ltd. approval to build a $40-million motor inn and chalet development in this community about 90 kilometres west of Calgary.

The project is to be completed in the spring of 1981.

'Garbage bear' puzzle

WASAGAMING, Man. (CP) — Unusually aggressive black bears in Riding Mountain National Park in Manitoba have park officials puzzled and concerned.

Five "garbage bears" have been killed this year, while at least a dozen incidents involving aggressive bears have been reported, says chief park warden Harry Campbell.

"This year in particular the bears seem to be more aggressive and we can't figure out why," he says. "If someone is on foot and runs into an aggressive bear, then you're in trouble."

Hikers and campers have had tents ripped by bears searching for food, and two wardens on horseback were forced to flee at full speed to escape charging black bears.

Campbell says the bears which charged the wardens had been previously wounded, probably by farmers.

Wardens have tried transporting bears to remote parts of the park, but have found the 1,840-square-kilometre park is not large enough.

No drought action

REGINA (CP) — The Saskatchewan government is not planning any emergency action to deal with near-drought conditions in some areas of the province, Premier Allan Blakeney said.

Blakeney said it is too early to assess the impact of weeks of hot, dry weather in some areas of the province.

Student appeals ruling

WINNIPEG (CP) — Former Winnipeg police constable Susan Irvine is appealing a court ruling that took away her right to attend law school at the expense of the force.

The ruling also reversed a Manitoba Police Commission order that she be reinstated on the force after being fired for refusing to leave school and return to duty.

Company sponsors refugees

CALGARY (CP) — Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. Ltd. will sponsor as many as 20 Vietnamese refugee families for resettlement throughout Alberta, the company said Monday.

A group of volunteers from the company was formed to help the refugees adjust to their new life.

The company said in a news release the federal immigration commission has approved the sponsorship. The first families will be received by the end of August.

Sponsorship involves a commitment of financial support for up to one year and includes provision of shelter, clothing, food and other necessities.

The company would also help the refugees in getting language training, upgrading job skills, finding work and getting medical care.

Senior vice-president Dianne Narvik said the federal immigration and external affairs departments had responded quickly to the company's offer.

"Government officials expressed the hope that our actions might encourage other corporations to consider sponsorships and it is for that reason we are today publicly stating our intentions."

Centre studies biting insects

WINNIPEG (CP) — Preliminary work to establish one of the first centres in Canada for the study of biting flies is under way at the University of Manitoba.

Dr. Mary Chance, who helped initiate the project, said she plans to travel widely to meet people with a special interest in horseflies, deer flies, black flies, biting midges, stable flies, horn flies and mosquitoes.

Dr. Chance said the centre's eventual role will be determined with the help of industrial companies whose employees work out-of-doors, pesticide firms, university researchers, public health groups, farm groups and all levels of government.

She said she hopes the centre will become indispensable to these groups, and that eventually they will pay for its work. The first goal will be to co-ordinate existing research efforts, but Dr. Chance said she hopes in time to offer training in insect survey and control programs.

Dr. Chance said there are 35 or 40 specialists across Canada studying three areas related to biting insects: human health, economic problems, and what she termed the nuisance factor for outdoor recreation.

Surveys by the centre could be useful in fighting diseases carried by biting insects, the most common of which — encephalitis, or sleeping sickness — is transmitted by mosquitoes.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

TO HOMEOWNERS AND GARDENERS

"USE OF PESTICIDES"

Extreme care must be exercised if you are using garden pesticides. These chemicals are highly toxic and the following precautions are recommended by the Department of Agriculture booklet "Pest Control for the Home and Garden" — 1979 edition.

1. Before opening the container, READ THE LABEL. Read it all, even the small print. Use only the pesticide that is recommended for the problem.
2. Measure the dosage exactly. Do not use a little extra "for good measure."
3. If dusts or sprays are spilled on skin or clothing, remove clothing immediately and wash contaminated skin with warm, soapy water. Clothing must be thoroughly cleaned before it is reused.
4. Cover feed and water containers when treating around livestock or pets. Do not contaminate fish ponds or waterways.
5. Take care that poison baits do not accidentally poison children or pets.
6. Avoid inhaling sprays or dusts. Always wear protective clothing and mask when the label calls for them.
7. Never smoke while spraying or dusting.
8. After applying pesticides, clean the equipment thoroughly. Clean and store your clothing and protective equipment.
9. Observe the required waiting period before harvesting of sprayed fruit or vegetables.

It is also suggested that:

Mixing of chemicals should be done at arms length to avoid inhaling fumes or splash-back.

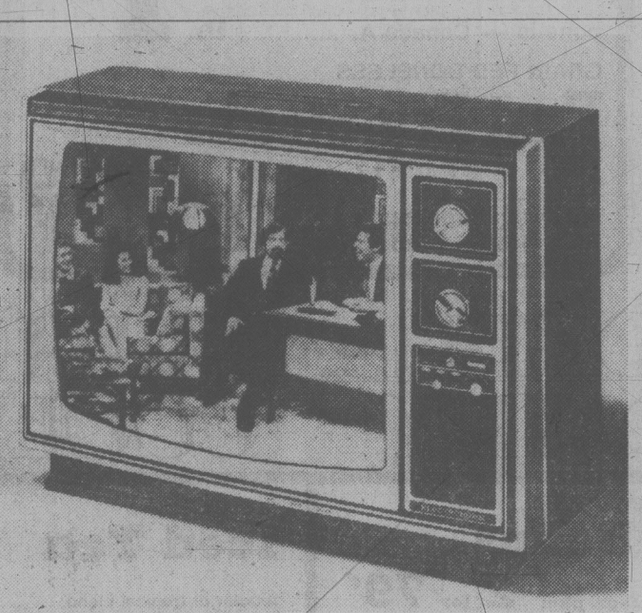

2. Never spray during windy or wet weather.
3. Allow spray material to dry out before allowing children or pets on the area.

Collier leaves helm pleading for ships

HALIFAX (CP) — Vice-Admiral Andrew Collier made a final pitch for new naval vessels Tuesday as he stepped down as commander of Maritime Command and retired from the Canadian Forces in a traditional ceremony.

Collier, a staunch advocate of a strong navy to counteract the Warsaw Pact build-up and maintain sea lanes to Europe in the event of war, said rebuilding of Canada's fleet must be the first priority.

Many of Canada's vessels are in need of repair, he said in a brief farewell address to about 200 servicemen and invited guests at the Canadian Forces Base Halifax.

Collier, who reached the retirement age of 55 in June, took command here two years ago after two years as commander of Maritime Forces Pacific and commander of Pacific Region.

He will be succeeded by Vice-Admiral John Allan, a native of Kirkland Lake, Ont., who began his naval career as an ordinary seaman 33 years ago. Allan was associate assistant deputy minister of materiel at national defence headquarters in Ottawa.

Fog shrouded the scene as a dockyard fireboat streaming water from its hoses and a whaleboat waited for the admiral to appear after a luncheon aboard the flag-bedecked destroyer Algonquin anchored in mid-harbor and to be rowed ashore by the commanding officers of several Maritime Command vessels.

Six officers preceded Collier into the whaler and, as a lone piper dressed in Nova Scotia tartan played on deck, they began to row away from the destroyer toward the dockyard.

On the press boat where photographers and television cameramen scrambled for pictures, Master George Newman recalled he was with Collier in Korea in 1950 when the admiral, then a navigation officer aboard the destroyer Cayuga, won the Distinguished Service Cross. Newman was an ordinary seaman aboard the vessel.

Collier won the award for his skill in navigating the vessel up a mine-infested river to cover United States troops as they retreated in the face of a Chinese Communist onslaught.

Woman's body identified

CHANDLER, Que. (CP) — Provincial police have identified the woman found floating in the Gulf of St. Lawrence last week with $3,600 stuffed into her bathing suit as Diane Labonte-Despard, of Hull, Que.

A police spokesman here said the identification was made with dental records.

Police believe the woman, wife of Ottawa entrepreneur Andre Despard, was believed to have been with four others, all aboard a $100,000 Jaguar V yacht which left Ottawa July 12 and was reported missing last Saturday.

Police said they believe the other passengers on the boat are the woman's husband, Lorraine Despard, Jacques Laflamme and Annick De Lahaie, all of Hull.

Language up to schools: Ryan

ST. JEROME, Que. (CP) — School authorities rather than "government bureaucrats" should decide on the language of schooling for children, Quebec Liberal leader Claude Ryan said Tuesday.

Appearing at a Liberal nomination meeting that acclaimed Solange Chaput-Rolland as Liberal candidate for a fall byelection in Prevost riding, Ryan told reporters that "by conversing" with children applying for entry to English-language schools, school officials should be able to decide if they could follow courses in English.

Under regulations of Quebec's two-year-old Charter of the French Language, all immigrant children must enter French-language schools. Previous Liberal legislation set up controversial language tests to determine if immigrant children were proficient enough in English to attend English-language schools.

Ryan said a regulation limiting access to English schools to the children of persons educated in English in Quebec is "ridiculous." He said it penalizes those "broad-minded enough" to put their children in schools where they would learn the other language.

The Liberal leader also said he favors a proposal by the Conseil du Patronat du Quebec, the province's largest association of employers, to amend the language charter to allow the children of certain specialists from outside Quebec free access to English-language schools.

MDs quit medicare

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Amid complaints that the government arbitrarily removed their rights to balance-bill patients without prior discussion, 17 of 18 doctors at the Charlottetown Clinic resigned on Tuesday from the provincial medicare program.

They are complaining that the regulation means they cannot set the fee for a visit if they remain in the program.

By balance billing, doctors can charge more than the standard medicare fee for a visit. They receive a standard fee for every patient from the Prince Edward Island Health Services Commission and bill the patient for the remainder.

Dr. J. H. O'Hanley, president of the P.E.I Medical Society, said: "No negotiations with a civil servant's union or government employees is permitted to end this way. Government expects us to accept this . . . the government has become more impatient and is saying, 'That's it boys, no more charter', after four or five months of negotiations and it ends like this."

The new regulation, which gives doctors a nine-per-cent fee increase but eliminates balance billing, is effective today.

Cheesy Supper Bread is a treat with almost all fruits and vegetables

Bread and salad days!

Kay Spicer

For a touch of warmth serve fresh from the oven — quick breads with cold inviting salads. It will take hardly any kitchen time.

Seek out the refrigerated biscuits or mixes in the supermarket. Slick tricks with them make quick breads even quicker.

Layered Parsley Loaf is a perfect partner for the taste surprises of Chicken Gourmet. Cheesy Supper Bread will be an unexpected treat with almost any fruit or vegetable salad.

CHEESY SUPPER BREAD

1 can (8-ounce) refrigerated buttermilk or sweetmilk biscuits
½ cup shredded Cheddar cheese
½ cup chopped onion (1 medium)
2 tablespoons butter

Grease 10-inch round cake pan or 12.8-inch baking dish. Separate biscuit dough into 10 biscuits. Place in prepared pan and gently press together to form base. Sprinkle cheese over biscuits. Saute onion in butter over low heat 2 to 3 minutes until tender. Top cheese with onion-butter mixture.

Bake 13 to 15 minutes or until golden brown. Cut into wedges or squares. Serve warm.

Makes 12 squares.

CHICKEN GOURMET

3 eggs
3 boned whole chicken breasts salt
1 pound fresh green beans
bottled oil and vinegar with herbs and spices green mayonnaise (below) or bottled green goddess salad dressing
½ bunch watercress or 2 cups shredded lettuce
⅛ teaspoon seasoned pepper
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon curry powder
½ cup cocktail onions

Place eggs in small saucepan with water to cover. Bring to a boil; remove from heat; let stand 15 minutes. Pour off water; cover with cold water. Cook boned chicken breasts in saucepan with 1 teaspoon salt, and water to barely cover, about 20 minutes, until tender.

Cook green beans in lightly salted water, 7 minutes until tender crisp. Rinse in cold water; drain. Sprinkle with oil and vinegar dressing; refrigerate, along with Green Mayonnaise and eggs. Remove skin from chicken breasts, then cut breasts into strips, about ½ inch wide. Slice eggs lengthwise. For salad tray, arrange beans at either end of it. Then place cress or lettuce down one side, with sliced eggs on top; sprinkle eggs with seasoned pepper and salt.

Arrange chicken strips along the sides radiating from cress; sprinkle it with curry. Place cocktail onions beside chicken. Pass Green Mayonnaise.

Makes six servings.

GREEN MAYONNAISE

10 sprigs watercress or 10 leaves spinach
⅓ cup water
¼ teaspoon dried tarragon
1 cup mayonnaise

Cook cress or spinach in water until just wilted. Blend in blender or food processor with liquid in which it cooked and tarragon (or put through a sieve). Stir puree into mayonnaise until blended. Refrigerate until serving time.

Makes 1¼ cups.

LAYERED PARSLEY LOAF

3 cans (8-ounce) refrigerated flaky buttermilk biscuits
1 tablespoon butter, melted
1 cup finely chopped parsley

Peel each biscuit into 2 parts. Place biscuits in two rows overlapping a bit, in a greased 7½ cup loaf pan. Brush with melted butter sprinkle with ¼ cup chopped parsley. Repeat with three more layers.

Top with rest of split biscuits, in 3 rows; brush with beaten egg. Bake in 400°F oven 1 hour (covered with foil to prevent excessive browning, if necessary). Cool 15 minutes; remove from pan.

Makes 1 loaf.

Summer sun bad for food

Whether you're having a feast on the patio or a light meal at the beach, proper food preparation and handling is important to prevent food-borne illness.

If food is left too long in the hot summer sun, bacteria such as salmonella can grow to dangerous levels leading to food poisoning. With a little care, it's easy to serve nutritious outdoor meals.

—Perishable foods such as meat, fish and shellfish, poultry, eggs, dairy products, salad dressings, puddings and custards, gravies and sauces should be kept cold (below 4° C.) or hot (above 40° C.).

—Clean hands, utensils and work areas are a must. Wash utensils and cutting surfaces before preparing each food to avoid spreading germs from one food to another. Do not place cooked meat on a plate that has held raw meat.

—Remember to keep HOT FOODS HOT and COLD FOODS COLD. When possible, store hot and cold foods in vacuum containers. Rinsing the vacuum container with boiling water before filling with hot food keeps the food from cooling off. Pre-chill containers with cold water before adding cold liquid or food.

—Keep insulated coolers well stocked with ice in a shady spot. Do not remove food from the cooler until ready to use.

—Freeze sandwiches and meat patties before placing them in the cooler. By the time you arrive at the picnic site the food will be thawed.

—Set out food in portions that will be eaten quickly; replenish serving dishes only as needed.

—Once you're through eating, put potentially unsafe leftovers in the refrigerator or cooler immediately. Check to see if there's enough ice left in the cooler to keep foods cold on the way home. If not, discard them.

—With a bit of pre-planning and some special care in handling foods, you and your family can enjoy both the great outdoors and some delicious meals this summer.

No substitute for nitrites yet but you can curb your intake

FOOD FOR THOUGHT
Dr. Jean Mayer
Dr. Johanna Dwyer

Imagine a hot, thick sandwich made of fresh rye bread, filled with appetizingly juicy pink corned beef. Imagine that same sandwich made from dull, grey boiled beef.

Think of weiners that spoil in two or three days in this time of penny-pinching food budgets. Think of restaurants famous for their smoked meats closing their doors.

What could cause the color to change, the meat to spoil and the restaurants to close? Removal of nitrites from cured meats.

Curing meats began years ago when fresh meat wasn't readily available. The nitrites used in curing gave the chracteristic color and flavor to cured meats. As well, curing offers two other benefits. It helps prevent the growth of a bacteria, clostridium botulinum, the cause of the most dangerous and deadly type of food poisoning, botulism. The growth of other bacteria is also decreased and the food doesn't spoil as quickly when nitrites are added.

According to one estimate, about eight hundred million pounds of meat would likely spoil and no longer be available to the Canadian consumer if nitrites were not used. This decreased meat supply would cause a further increase in the already skyrocketing price of most meats.

If curing has so many advantages, why is there increasing concern about the use of nitrites in foods? Quite simply, use of nitrites in foods has been linked to cancer.

Under certain conditions, nitrites combine with other substances, known as amines, which are found in food, tobacco smoke and produced naturally in our bodies. The result of this combination is nitrosamines and that's when the problems begin.

Feeding nitrosamines and nitrites to laboratory animals causes malignant tumors or cancer. But we must point out that the amounts of these substances in foods are much lower than the amounts which cause tumors in animals.

There is no definite proof that nitrites can cause cancer in humans. However, there has been increasing pressure on government to ban the use of nitrites. The United States is presently considering a plan to phase out the use of nitrites as soon as comparable preservatives become available. But no one knows when that will happen.

Canada is also looking at possibilities in this area — seven hundred possible preservatives have been tested and none of them has been found to be a suitable substitute.

In the U.S. recently, bacon was tested where sorbate was added as a nitrite substitute. This caused sore throats and other severe allergy problems. So it was back to the drawing board.

Even if nitrites are banned as food additives, there will still be some in the food supply. Spinach, beets, lettuce, celery, carrots, eggplant and radishes, all naturally contain nitrites, but these foods also contain many important nutrients so we certainly don't recommend that you stop eating them because of the nitrites.

Also, our own bodies produce nitrites. It has been estimated that we get four times more nitrites from our own saliva than we do from our food!

We think that the benefits of nitrites outweigh their potential harmful effect. Maybe you're not convinced and want to decrease your intake of nitrites until the final word is in. You can do so without affecting your nutrient intake a great deal.

Simply use fresh or frozen meats, fish and poultry that hasn't been smoked or cured. Avoid products such as smoked meats.

Beef Stroganoff with pimento sauce

Lots of cream makes this stroganoff count

The lavish use of smetana (sour cream) is quite common in Russian dishes — including its use in this aristocratic dish named for the 19th century diplomat, Count Stroganoff.

BEEF STROGANOFF WITH PIMENTO RICE

- 1½ pounds boneless chuck roast, cut in thin, narrow stips
- 2 tablespoons shortening or oil
- 2 small bay leaves
- 2 cloves garlic, crushed
- 3 cups beef broth
- 1½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 2½ cups chopped onions
- ⅓ cup flour
- ½ cup sherry, optional
- ½ cup sour cream
- ½ cup chopped green pepper
- 1 tablespoon butter or margarine
- 3 cups cooked rice
- ¼ cup diced pimentos

Cook meat in shortening until brown. Add bay leaves, garlic and 2 cups of broth. Cover; simmer one hour or until tender. Add seasonings and 2 cups onions. Mix a little broth into the flour and blend to a smooth paste. Add rest of broth and wine. Stir into meat mixture. Cook about 10 minutes longer. Remove from heat; discard bay leaves. Stir in sour cream.

Meanwhile, saute green pepper and remaining onions in butter until tender. Stir in rice; season with additional salt and pepper. Heat thoroughly. Add pimentos; fluff lightly with a fork. Serve over pimento rice.

Makes six servings.

Toasted mushroom roll-ups

- 2 cups finely chopped mushrooms (not packed)
- 2 tbsp. butter
- 1 tbsp. lemon juice
- 2 tbsp. finely chopped green onions
- salt (to taste)
- dash each of MSG and pepper
- ¼ tsp. curry powder (optional)
- approx. 12 slices white bread (crusts removed; flattened with rolling pin)
- extra softened butter

In skillet, place prepared mushrooms, 2 tbsp. butter, lemon juice, green onions, salt, MSG, pepper, and curry powder. Cook, stirring frequently until mushrooms are just tender (several minutes). Remove from heat (there will be a small amount of liquid in skillet). Prepare bread slices; butter with softened butter; spread with mushroom mixture (approx. 1 tbsp. per bread slice).

Roll up each bread slice in jelly-roll fashion. Spread outside of roll-ups with softened butter. Place on cookie sheet, seam side down. Bake in 425° F. oven for approx. 10 minutes (or until golden brown) turning roll-ups half way through cooking process to brown evenly. To serve, cut roll-ups in half crosswise; serve immediately. NOTE: Appetizers can be made up in advance and refrigerated until ready to bake.

Here are some shortcuts to delicious lamb chops

the 60-minute gourmet

A short while back, at a reader's request, I outlined the simplest method of seasoning and cooking a fish and at the same time making it appealing. More and more in this day and age, people are learning that some of the simplest dishes have a grand and justifiable appeal.

Here are two of the quickest and simplest methods for cooking lamb chops. In one, the chops are cooked under a broiler flame, and in the other, they are "pan-broiled," or cooked in a skillet.

Should you choose to cook lamb chops under the broiler of your home stove, the cooking time will depend primarily on two things. The first is how hot the source of heat is. That temperature will vary with the stove, even when the heat is at its highest setting. The second thing is how close the meat is placed to the source of heat.

If you want the meat to be quite rare inside, put the meat quite close to the flame, turning once and browning well but quickly on both sides. The oven door should be left open at all times while broiling. The meat will tend to "steam" if enclosed.

Should you wish to pan-broil your chops, the skillet should be heavy. A black iron skillet is ideal. Do not add any form of fat, but heat the skillet until almost "smoking," or red hot.

Add the chops and cook about three or four minutes to a side; longer if you want the meat well done. Set the lamb chops on their edges, fat side down, and cook until nicely browned. Remove the chops, pour off the fat the cooking has produced and add butter to the hot skillet.

When melted, pour this over the chops (you may flavor the butter with a dash of garlic) and sprinkle with parsley.

Cotes d'Agneau Grill (Flamed lamb chops)

- 8 loin lamb chops, each about ½ pound and about 1½ inches thick
- Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

1. Preheat the broiler on High.

2. Sprinkle the chops with salt and pepper. Arrange the chops on a baking rack and place under the broiler about five or six inches from the source of heat. Leave the broiler door open. Broil about five minutes on one side and turn.

3. Continue broiling the second side. If you want to speed up cooking for a rarer interior, move the broiling pan closer to the source of heat, about three inches away. Cook about three minutes. If you want a medium or well-done interior, leave the broiler in its original position and broil about 5 to 10 minutes.

Yields four servings.

Cotes d'Agneau Poelees (Pan-broiled lamb chops)

- 8 loin lamb chops, each about ½ pound and about 1½ inches thick
- Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
- 4 tablespoons butter
- 1 teaspoon finely chopped garlic
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley.

1. Sprinkle the chops with salt and pepper on all sides.

2. Use one or two such heavy skillets as the black iron ones, large enough to hold the chops in one layer.

3. Heat the skillet until almost smoking. Do not add any oil or other fat. Add the chops and cook on one side about four minutes until well browned. The chops should be cooked at all times over moderately high heat. Turn the chops and pour off the resultant fat from the skillet or skillets.

4. Continue cooking the chops on the second side, about three minutes.

5. Set the lamb chops up on their edges to cook the rim of fat. It may be necessary to let them rest against the sides of the skillet to keep them upright. Let cook about two minutes and return them to the second side and continue cooking about one minute.

6. Remove the chops to a warm platter and discard the fat in the skillet. Add the butter to the skillet and when it is hot, add the garlic. Cook briefly and pour over the chops. Serve sprinkled with chopped parsley.

Yields four servings.

Broiled Tomatoes With Oregano

- 2 large red, ripe tomatoes
- 5 teaspoons peanut, vegetable or corn oil
- 4 teaspoons dried oregano
- Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste.

1. Preheat the broiler.

2. Core the tomatoes and slice them in half.

3. Grease a baking pan, large enough to hold the tomato halves, with one teaspoon of oil. Arrange the halves over it, cut side up.

4. Sprinkle each half with one-half teaspoon oregano, salt and pepper. Sprinkle one teaspoon oil over each half and place the tomatoes under the broiler. Broil about five minutes.

Yields four servings.

Stretching meatloaf

Make the most of your meat money: To stretch a meatloaf into more servings, stuff it with your favorite stuffing. To tenderize boiling beef, add a little vinegar or use part tomato juice as the cooking liquid. For an inexpensive marinade to tenderize round or chuck steaks, stir up vegetable oil and vinegar mixture — about half and half.

That snacking habit a sign of job boredom?

Hilda Beastall

It seems not so long ago that three meals a day meant good nutritious food that lasted us for 24 hours, 16 of them being hours of physical and mental activity. There were no snack periods, and only on rare occasions a coffee break.

What we were not accustomed to, we did not miss. Few of us who ate well at mealtimes had a thought of being hungry until the next meal. There just was not time set aside for such things in the '20s and '30s.

One opinion of today's snacking habit is that millions of Canadians and Americans are simply bored with their occupations, the lack of interest creating a form of hunger which can only be appeased with sweet, starchy snack food.

Try offering 10 people of mixed ages and types a mid-morning snack of half a cheese and lettuce sandwich on wholewheat bread when the call is for a snack.

Nine out of the 10 will refuse, saying they will take a couple of cookies or a Danish pastry. The one who takes and enjoys the sandwich will most likely be the one who enjoyed a nutritious breakfast at home around six-thirty and realizes there are still two hours to go before lunch. But the half cheese sandwich will not create the same habit of snacking as will sugar and fat cookies.

Legitimate snacking is recommended by physicians to rebuild after illness, surgery or other disasters when the body has been depleted by inability to eat, or just lack of appetite. This is when nutritious snacks are required at two-hourly intervals, for the regular meals are likely to be of small volume.

Young children who enjoy small portions of food served as regular fare at mealtimes are likely to need a nutritious snack two hours later.

If they are normally active and healthy, a thin slice of wholewheat bread folded over into a sandwich will be accepted. In hot weather, when local fresh apples are available, offer a small apple of good flavor peeled and cored for the small children. A large apple no matter how good, is rarely finished — it is too big a job.

For most of us, some kind of raw fruit and a supply of homemade, baked snacks on hand will meet any emergency of snack need. By keeping sugar and fat content low, and quality of flour and other grains high, homemade, baked snacks fill the need for instant nutrition. And they are not so habit-forming as those with high sugar and fat content.

Homemade Wheat Crackers are a favorite snack food, for their rich grain flavors, crisp yet chewy texture, their ease of making and the fact that every calory consumed has its quota of nutrition. No empty calories here.

Three or four medium-sized Wheat Crackers are good to take on a strenuous morning hike. Use metric measuring cup and spoons to make this recipe. No conversions necessary.

WHEAT CRACKERS

125 ml unbleached flour
125 ml oat flakes
250 ml wholewheat flour
60 ml wheat germ
25 ml wheat bran
1 ml baking soda
1 ml salt
25 ml skim milk powder
25 ml brown sugar
100 ml soft margarine
60 ml cold water
60 ml fine ground sunflower seeds or unsalted peanuts

Into mixing bowl measure unbleached flour and all remaining dry ingredients. Mix well with large wooden spoon.

Cut in margarine with two knives until mixture is crumbly.

Add water a little at a time, mixing with big spoon until dough begins to stick together. Now mold with the hands until a smooth, firm ball is formed.

Lightly flour a sheet of waxed paper; roll out a portion of dough to less than ¼-inch thickness.

Cut into circles with a 2½-inch and a 1¼-inch cookie cutter, lightly dusted with flour. Fit cookies to a greased cookie sheet, filling the sheet with the two sizes. Makes about three dozen.

Bake in warm oven 160° C. for 25 or 30 minutes until very lightly browned and dry enough to slide when sheet is shaken.

Let cool before storing. They remain crisp for several weeks.

Another type of snack that can be carried in a hiker's side pocket in a small plastic bag, or in a back pack in larger quantity, is homemade Granola Mix. Precooked at home, it may be chewed in small quantity while hiking or biking. As it contains milk powder, a drink of fresh water is all you'll need to follow it.

Again, use your metric cup and measuring spoons to put this together. No problems.

GRANOLA MIX

375 ml oat flakes
375 ml wheat flakes
125 ml wheat germ
125 ml wheat bran
250 ml sesame seeds OR chopped unsalted peanuts
75 ml rice polishings
75 ml soy grits
75 ml sunflower oil OR soft margarine
50 ml sugar
125 ml skim milk powder
few grains salt (optional)

Measure and mix all together, adding about 100 ml water, drizzled over surface, then mixed in with two large forks.

Spread half-inch deep on cookie sheet or in large shallow pan. Bake, uncovered, in slow to warm oven until crisp and dry. Stir occasionally, as sides brown first. Prevent scorching or overbaking.

Mix and cool well when taken from oven; store in glass jars at home, in dry cool place.

To save electricity, or other fuel, make Granola when oven being used for other baking. Put Granola in when first preheating; cover loosely with foil.

Remove when baking other foods if oven heat above the "slow" needed for Granola. Replace without foil when heat is turned off if oven retains heat for 45 minutes or longer.

Both the above snack foods to make at home are nutritious and economical.

Nothing beats soups for dog-days droops!

August is a particularly good time to serve soup, fresh garden vegetables are abundant, economical and nutritious.

For liquid, try seasoned tomato juice, chicken broth, beef stock or cooking liquid from vegetables. Almost any vegetable goes.

As soup ingredients vary in their cooking times, the trick is to add the quick-cooking ingredients near the end, so that everything is done at the same time. For example, whole vegetables or large vegetable pieces take from 45 to 60 minutes, whereas sliced vegetables or small vegetable pieces need about 30 minutes.

When the shape of the vegetable is important, as with mushroom and zucchini slices, just pop them in for the last 10 minutes. This is just about right for frozen vegetables as well. Add canned or cooked vegetables at the last minute and heat until the soup returns to a simmer.

Seasonings are also very important for successful soup making. The longer the soup is held, the more flavors intensify. Be careful not to overseason at the beginning. You can always add more just before serving. Common soup seasonings include salt, pepper, paprika, celery seed, bay leaf, garlic, thyme, allspice, dill, chives and dry mustard.

The following Minestrone Soup was developed by the food consultants at Food Advisory Division. It's a great change of fare for lunch or a light supper — try it with a vegetable salad and a fruit for dessert. Furthermore, it's a 30-minute homemade vegetable soup.

MINESTRONE SOUP

½ cup chopped onion
½ cup sliced celery
1 cup cubed zucchini
1 clove garlic, crushed
¼ cup fat
6 cups chicken bouillon
1 5½-ounce can tomato paste
1 cup coarsely chopped cabbage
½ cup sliced green beans
½ cup diced carrot
½ cup diced potatoes
1 tablespoon chopped fresh parsley
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon basil
¼ teaspoon celery seed
1 cup cooked navy beans
2 ounces uncooked spaghetti, broken in quarters
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

Saute onion, celery, zucchini and garlic in fat until onion is transparent. Add bouillon, tomato paste, vegetables and seasonings. Bring to boil. Reduce heat and simmer until vegetables are almost tender (about 20 minutes). Add beans and spaghetti; simmer until spaghetti is tender (about 10 minutes more).

Sprinkle each bowl of soup with about a teaspoon of Parmesan cheese before serving. Serves eight.

Craig Claiborne

Cold, salt-free

NEW YORK — While recently engaged in research for an article on no-salt cookery, I was invited to dinner by a good friend and neighbor, Shana Alexander, the author and television personality. She served cold soup, subtly flavored and excellent, and created almost wholly, she confessed, without salt.

There was a good deal of guessing as to the ingredients of the soup, only some of which were obvious. There were shrimp and dill and cucumber, that much was plain. But as to the base of the soup, several people guessed, incorrectly, that it was yogurt. There was another flavor slightly pungent that defied general analysis.

Eventually Shana explained that the soup was one that she had been served years ago one warm summer day in the California home of M. F. K. Fisher, that most excellent and inspired of food writers. The only difference was Shana had eliminated the salt from the recipe, which she had found later in Mrs. Fisher's admirable collection of essays, The Art of Eating, first published in 1954 and now available in paperback (Vintage Books, $6.95, 1976).

This is Mrs. Fisher's recipe. If you wish to serve it without salt, simply omit the salt in cooking the shrimp and do not add salt to the soup. In lieu of commercial mustard, which contains salt, use dry mustard blended with enough water to make a thin paste.

Cold Buttermilk Soup

1½ pounds shrimp, cooked and chopped
12 medium-size cucumber, finely diced
1 tablespoon (or more) chopped fresh dill
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon sugar
4 cups buttermilk.

Combine all the ingredients in a bowl and chill thoroughly.

Yields six servings.

Not always fun when 'roots' are dug

Dear Abby
by Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I can understand the adopted child's desire to know who his "real" parents were. I'm sure that almost every person who sets out to find his "real" parents imagines that he or she is the product of a beautiful, impetuous love affair between a couple who were forced by circumstances to part.

Such is not always the case. A child can be born as a result of lust, greed, fear, intimidation, blackmail, rape and a number of other ugly situations. Abortions were not always possible, and if they were, many would have refused.

Before a person starts searching for his "roots," I suggest he or she ask this question: Would I be more or less happy if my real mother were to say to me, "I don't know who your father was. You were conceived in a brothel and he had $5."

Or, "I got drunk one night and found out later that I was pregnant. When I told the boy, he took off and I never saw him again."

Or, "Your father forced my car off the road one dark night."

Or, "I was an Army nurse in the Second World War and your father was a superior officer and I was afraid to report the attack."

Who would want to be the product of an affair between the Jewish girl in Holocaust and the prison guard who promised to keep her young Jewish husband alive in return for her favors?

I think someone should point out that these mothers might well be protecting their illegitimate children from futher pain by disclosing the circumstances of their conception. — SPEAKING FOR MYSELF

DEAR ABBY: Our son has been going with the same girl for the last four years. They met in college and have been going steady ever since. We have met her and like her very much.

They are planning to marry this November. Although we live in the same city as the girl's parents, we have never met them. I know of no reason for this except that neither side has ever taken the initiative.

Is there any rule regarding which set of parents is supposed to invite the other first? If the parents of the boy are supposed to make the first move, when and how to do go about it?
— HIS FOLKS

DEAR FOLKS: It's your move. Telephone the girl's parents and tell them how happy you and your husband are about the engagement. Then invite them to join you as soon as possible for lunch, dinner, cocktails, tea or whichever is mutually convenient.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter thinks she knows everything. She says that if children have the same father but different mothers, they are half-sisters and brothers. But if they have the same mother and different fathers they are stepsisters and brothers. I say that when children have the same mother but different fathers or the same father but different mothers they are considered half-sisters and brothers.

And stepchildren are simply "adopted" children. Please straighten this out since we are having some very loud arguments about it.
— PROVING A POINT

DEAR PROVING: Stepchildren are the children of one's husband or wife by a previous marriage. Half-sisters and half-brothers are sisters and brothers through one parent only.

YOUR HEALTH
by L. L. Coleman, MD

Back remedy 'miraculous'

Dramatic results in the treatment of herniated discs of the spine have been reported with the use of the drug, colchicine, normally used in the treatment for gout.

A pilot study was conducted of 50 patients with disc problems who were treated in this manner by Dr. Michael Rask. He reported his findings at a recent meeting of the Academy of Neurological Orthopedic Surgeons.

In some instances, patients with acute problems were given relief with a single treatment. Dr. Rask said, "The response was so dramatic, it is miraculous. I believe every patient with acute and chronic disc syndrome deserves a four to six week trial with colchicine."

Undoubtedly, these studies which have been so enthusiastically received will be further pursued by other physicians working in the same field. Certainly, the preliminary work, a radical departure from traditional methods of treatment, will be a great contribution to sufferers of this painful and debilitating condition.

The popularity of unsupervised high protein crash diets is recognized as being fraught with danger. An additional study of interest shows that some patients with excessive protein in their diet may develop a severe calcium loss which leads to the deposit of stones in the kidney.

Dr. Helen Linkswiler, at the University of Wisconsin, said, "Our data shows that high protein diets can be devastating to the bones."

There is a considerable amount of ongoing research in this area that tends to emphasize the potential hazards of the high protein crash diet. Before embarking on such a program, dieters are advised to consult with their own doctors, who can best weigh the advantages and the disadvantages for each patient.

A new test for the early recognition of multiple sclerosis has recently been reported. Dr. John W. Angers, director of the Human Immunology Foundation in New York City, and his co-workers, have reported excellent results in a large series of patients. They feel that, by a complex process, they can reduce the time it takes to establish the diagnosis.

Further trials are continuing to confirm the validity of these experimental studies. When one confirmed, the tests will be added to the many that are being accumulated by researchers in all parts of the world.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♡	Pass	2◇	2♠
3♡	Pass	4♡

Opening lead — king of spades.

Let's assume you're West and that your opponents bid and make four hearts. In that case, they score 700 points for winning the rubber and they also collect 120 points for the trick score — a total of 820 points.

Now let's also suppose you defeat the contract either because of your skill or declarer's lack of it. In that event, you'd be richer, depending on how you view such matters.

You could argue that the only actual gain is the 100 points you wrote down on the score sheet. Alternatively, you could argue that you had improved your position 920 points by depriving declarer of an 820-point score and by scoring 100 points for your side instead.

But, regardless of which philosophy you adopt in such matters, the fact remains that there's a big difference in scoring between a contract that's made and a contract that's defeated. In the accompanying hand, it's easy to see how important it is to defend against four hearts correctly — because bad defence allows declarer to make the contract and good defence defeats it.

There are two hurdles to be surmounted. One arises at trick one, when East should overtake the spade king with the ace in order to be able to play the queen next. This is not a very challenging play, since East can easily afford to go up with the ace, regardless of whether South has a singleton, a doubleton or even a void in spades.

The second hurdle arises when East plays a third spade at trick three. If South ruffs with the queen, West must not overruff with the king! He should discard in the hope that East was dealt either the jack or ten of hearts, in which event declarer will later have to lose two trump tricks and go down one.

SOLUTIONS THURSDAY

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Thursday, August 2
By SIDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on long-range projects, dealings with Leo and Aquarius natives. You make significant, new contact. Aggressive individual makes known views. You gain insight; you're able now to percieve potential and to make most of it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Hunch pays off — you regain sense of direction. Money, investments, partner or mate command more-than-usual attention. One who seemed distant could now be warm, interested and make gesture of affection.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Emphasis on contractural arrangements, public relations, a meeting with one whose views oppose your own. Stress versatility, enlarge horizons, be flexible without losing sight of the basic goal. Third try could be the charm.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Count your change — and your blessings. One who depends upon you returns the favor, You are repaid. What had apparently been lost will be recovered. Aquarius, Leo, Scorpio natives figure prominently. Stick to factual material.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be ready for action! Emphasis on change, variety, travel — Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius natives figure in exciting scenario. Stick with number 5. Romance, creativity, imprinting of style, better communication with young persons or offspring — these also are highlights.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Domestic relationships harmonize; you get chance to reciprocate, to return favors, to display affection, Strive for quality — select best material. Transaction, heightening your security, can be successfully concluded.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Define terms, steer away from self-deception. Short trip, communication from close relatives — these also crowd scenario. Humor, versatility can be valuable, twin allies. Avoid driving with one under influence of "medication."

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Production, accepting challenge, responsibility — and money and love capture essence of this cycle. Chips are down — they fell your way! Know it and act accordingly. You get green light from one who is in position of authority.

SAGGITARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Universal appeal is keynoted. Popularity is on upswing. People are drawn to you. You're a winner! Cycle is high — you get what is needed. Judgment, intuition ring bell of accuracy. Aries, Libra natives figure prominently.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Look behind scenes for "action." What you had feared could become a definite asset. Leo, Aquarius persons figure prominently. You meet someone — and it could be the start of "something big!" Toss aside apprehension — get to heart of matters.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Emphasis on emotional responses, creative capabilities, affection, friendship, reward for profitable business decisions. Another Aquarian is very much in picture. Accept dinner invitation. It could e a gourmet delight!

PICES (Feb. 19-March 20): Highlight career containing a more responsible, lucrative position. Elevate self-esteem. Diversify — make inquiries, expand horizons, expect marvelous things to occur. What only yesterday appeared to be too expensive is now within reach.

IF AUGUST 2 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are sensitive, psychic, dramatic, stubborn, dynamic and sensual. Cancer, Capricorn persons play important roles in your life. August could be your most significant month of 1979, a year featuring production, power, money, permanent "alliance." You recover from emotional wound, suffered towards latter part of last year.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Jane handed back the photo. "Quite a man. I only met Ted once and that was ten years ago," she said. "He informed me that you were half the square of his age. Does he still think up things like that?"

"Sure, and he remembers you." Sam chuckled. "Today, when he heard you were coming, he remarked that I'm just double the sum of his age now and what it was then."

How old was the boy when Jane first met him?

Thanks for an idea to A. Graham, New Liskeard, Ontario.

(Answer tomorrow)

Yesterday's answer: YAMEN was 13658.

Directors ride rollercoaster

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Motion picture directors lead lives second only in career peril to nitroglycerin jugglers. They epitomize men who lead lives of quiet desperation.

Director Larry Peerce, son of famed singer Jan Peerce, finds himself dangling in limbo at the completion of every movie.

If the picture is a hit — his first biggy was Goodbye Columbus, Peerce is given a reprieve and another film project. If it flops, he's unemployed and likely to stay that way until and unless he conjures up a project of his own.

Most directors exist in a greater vacuum than do the stars who can lay the blame of a bomb on a poor script, inferior direction, inept editing or subhuman costars. The director has only himself to fault.

In the days of the studio contract system directors enjoyed the same security as stars. They were assigned three or four films a year unburdened by responsibility for scripts.

Neither did they find themselves hustling to raise money for their pictures.

Today, directors, almost without exception, free lance. They are judged almost solely on their latest film.

Past track records mean nothing unless a director has a public cult following or a mystique reputation among producers. A prime example is Robert Altman who hasn't had an unqualified hit in years.

In rare cases directors "fail up." They are the men who have enormous hits in their pasts and no matter how many bad films they make, producers gamble on the possibility they'll play back to their early triumphs.

A few young turks such as Francis Ford Coppola (The Godfather), Steve Spielberg (Jaws) and George Lucas (Star Wars) work whenever they like. They've attained god-like status, thanks to the box office.

But the great body of directors live as precariously as Peerce, a bearded man with a Machiavellian look about him. He's in his 40s and lives with actress Marilyn Hassett. He has had his share of hits and bombs.

Hypertension is an occupational fact of life Peerce has learned to live with. Each of his films extracts a year of his time and probably reduces his life span by the same degree.

"It must have been wonderful to be under studio contract," he said recently. "Directors worked every day, making good, bad and mediocre pictures. Today you make two flops in a row and it's all over.

"That happened to me in 1974. I'd directed Ash Wednesday with Elizabeth Taylor and A Separate Peace. They weren't hits. I came back from England, divorced and flat broke. I couldn't get a job. Nobody would hire me.

"I became desperate. I asked my agent to get me a TV picture because I needed money to live on. The picture was The Stranger Who Looks Like Me for Ed Feldman at Filmways."

The project was enormously successful and Peerce was back in the movie business — temporarily. He and Feldman made The Other Side of the Mountain, Two Minute Warning and The Other Side of the Mountain, Part II.

"When The Other Side of the Mountain grossed $50 million, I was instantly back on my feet. I paid off my debts and bought a house.

"Then the cycle started all over again, putting my life on the line with every picture. You have your future riding on every film. It's almost an impossible situation to live with.

"Last year I directed The Bell Jar which cost only $1.8 million. I got killed. I liked it but nobody else did.

"So I found myself back at the beginning, trying to put together a project as I did with my very first feature, One Potato, Two Potato. I can't wait for a producer or studio to call. I have to get out and hustle."

Peerce will begin directing The Fabricator on locations in Spokane, Wash., next month with Treat Williams and Lisa Eichhorn starring.

"It's not just a matter of directing," he said. "You dedicate a year of your life to pre-production, shooting schedule and post-production. You hope to hell you're able to project a year in advance what audiences will want to see.

"The first thing I do is work on the script to make it something I'll be happy with. Then comes casting, which can be tough, especially trying to find an 8-year-old boy for a key role as I did for this film.

"There were locations to be scouted in New England and the northwest. We finally settled for the north country.

"The Fabricator has the same good feeling about it, the same light touch that Goodbye, Columbus had going for it. Even now, just before we start shooting, I'm thinking ahead to another picture.

"The whole thing is a rollercoaster trip and at this moment I hope I'm on the upgrade."

Heritage experts gather

Heritage experts from across Canada will converge on Victoria this fall for the Heritage Canada sixth annual conference and workshop to be held at The Empress.

The five-day meeting starting Oct. 17 will include a session on local government conservation planning featuring Victoria, Calgary and Winnipeg.

Michael Middleton of the British Civic Trust, Dr. Harold Kalman, conservation consultant for Walt Disney Corp, California, Mary Means, National Trust for Historic Preservation, and Barton Myers, Toronto architect and planner, are among the principal speakers.

Just call it clastic pedally haptic . . .

OTTAWA (CP) — Regarded by enthusiasts as one of the wonders of the contemporary art world, 25 tons of cement building blocks have been laid on the floor of the National Gallery for a 2½-month showing.

It's a work called Cuts, by Carl Andre of New York, who says it gives him a feeling of "fierce calm — not the contented-cow kind of calm, but a calm that comes from pleasure in being."

He told 50 gallery tour guides and visitors late Tuesday when he finished arranging the 1,500 pieces that his art is "clastic pedally haptic." That means it's made up of pieces, and you can walk on it.

The visitors dutifully walked across the cement blocks loaned to the gallery by a local building supply firm, picking their way gingerly among the nine holes left in the arrangement.

The holes are important, of course. Andre said he always liked digging holes in sandpits as a kid in New England, and that inspires his art.

"I'd rather cut holes in the floors of the gallery, but that can't be done. So I overlay the floors with these cement blocks and then make holes in them."

OPEC 'not cause' of oil squeeze

By ROSS EVANS
Washington Star

WASHINGTON — The OPEC oil cartel is not the cause of today's high oil prices, and world prices could be even higher in a free market, outgoing U.S. Energy Secretary James Schlesinger says.

"If anything at the present time, a strictly free market for oil might raise rather than lower the price of oil," Schlesinger told the Senate Finance Committee Tuesday.

Schlesinger voiced the assessment while testifying for President Jimmy Carter's proposed windfall profits tax.

In the face of the committee's obvious sentiment for earmarking some of the tax revenues for its own purposes, Schlesinger indicated that there may be some flexibility in the administration's position.

Some exceptions to the tax should be considered, Schlesinger said — in contrast to Carter's strong stand last week against such modifications.

There could be more revenue available — and less need to spend it on synthetic fuel subsidies as Carter has proposed — if world oil prices go up faster than the administration has assumed, Schlesinger said.

That assumption — that the Organizaton of Petroleum Exporting Countries will not increase its prices faster than general inflation — is both "tenuous" and "conservative," Schlesinger said. He predicted a faster price increase.

Underlining that prediction, Schlesinger said there are basic economic forces, not just OPEC actions, behind the cartel's increasing prices.

"The relevancy" of popular notion that the world oil price is high only because of OPEC "disappeared once demand overtook supply," Schlesinger said.

"The excess capacity that two years ago might have driven prices down is no longer there," he said.

Reflecting the possibility that the tax pie to be divided could be bigger than the $142 billion administration estimate, Schlesinger agreed that some exceptions to the domestic windfall tax should be considered.

When Sen. David Boren, Dem-Okla., asked Schlesinger why some oil production in expensive locations should not be exempt from an estimated $6.8 billion tax, Schlesinger responded that Boren's point was "well taken, and I think we should address those issues."

F-14 buy-back bid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is trying to buy back 78 sophisticated F-14 fighter planes from Iran, the state department announced Tuesday.

The effort to retrieve the sophisticated aircraft is prompted partly by fear the U.S.-made planes will fall into Soviet hands.

"We have been discussing with the Iranian government the possibility of our buying back the F-14s . . . but there has been no final resolution yet," a state department spokesman said.

The F-14s originally cost about $25 million each but the U.S. has told Iran it will not pay that much for the used planes, The Washington Post reported in today's editions.

TEHRAN (AP) — An Iranian religious leader who claims he is masterminding a plot to kill deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, said today that a "Red Army" similar to the Japanese terrorist organization has been formed to assassinate the shah.

Ayatollah Sadeq Khalkali said the shah, close members of the monarch's family and former aides have been sentenced to death in absentia by a revolutionary court.

However, there has been no other indication that such a trial took place, and Iranian Foreign Minister Ibrahim Yazdi has said official government policy is not to assassinate the shah, but to bring him back to Iran for trial.

Last month, after the shah arrived at his home-in-exile in Cuernavaca, Mexico, Khalkhali claimed revolutionary commandos tried twice to kill him, but Mexican authorities and spokesmen for the shah said the claims were false.

Bundy a 'total waste of humanity'

MIAMI (AP) — Condemned by a judge as "a total waste of humanity," Theodore Bundy has been ordered to pay with his life for the beating and strangulation murders of two sleeping women.

"In a way, this is my opening statement," the articulate former law student said in an emotion-choked monologue Tuesday shortly before he was ordered to die in Florida's electric chair.

"This is just the first . . . early round of a long battle," Bundy vowed between sniffles. "I haven't given up by any means." It was the first time in his five-week trial he had shown any emotion.

He refused to plead for mercy. "Absurd," said Bundy, "to ask for mercy for something I did not do."

Judge Edward Cowart told Bundy: "It's a tragedy for this court to see such a total waste of humanity. You're a bright young man. You'd have made a good lawyer. I'd have loved to have you practise before me. But you went another way, partner."

Twice the judge ordered Bundy put to death "by a current of electricity . . . passed through your body until you are dead," for the deaths of Margaret Bowman, 21, and Lisa Levy, 20.

Cowart said the beating of Miss Bowman "was vicious, vile, wicked and atrocious."

Both women were attacked with a crude oak club as they slept in the Chi Omega Sorority house at Florida State University in Tallahassee the morning of Jan. 15, 1978. Bundy was also convicted of three counts of attempted murder in the beatings of three other women who lived in the sorority house and in a nearby apartment. Cowart sentenced Bundy to 198 years in prison for burglary.

Bundy's mother, Louise Bundy, 52, of Tacoma, Wash., looked at the courtroom floor as the sentences were imposed on the son she has called "my pride and joy." Then she left, tight-lipped, saying nothing.

Mulder denies guilt in scandal coverup

PRETORIA (AP) — Former South African information minister Connie Mulder pleaded not guilty today to charges he refused to answer questions asked by a government commission investigating the Infogate scandal.

The scandal resulted from allegations of irregularities in the use of a secret government propaganda fund of more than $100 million. President John Vorster resigned after the investigating commission reported that he lied when he said he knew nothing of the irregularities.

Mulder was interior minister as well as information minister when Vorster was prime minister and had been considered likely to succeed him until newspapers disclosed the scandal. Mulder lost his cabinet post and was expelled from the ruling National Party.

Gov't studies relief for ailing Chrysler

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Financially strapped Chrysler Corp. Tuesday reported a staggering second-quarter loss of $207.1 million, and the U.S. Treasury Department said it is studying the automaker's plight with a view toward some government relief.

At a Detroit press conference, Chrysler chairman John Riccardo and president Lee A. Iacocca said they believed government relief is likely.

Riccardo said the company is seeking $500 million a year over the next two years in speeded-up tax credits, largely to pay for compliance with government regulations. The company also is seeking a two-year delay in compliance with stepped-up air-pollution standards that it estimates would save $600 million in cash through 1982.

In Washington, the Treasury Department said it has "monitored Chrysler's financial situation in the past several months and is concerned about its possible impact on the over-all economy and on the employees of Chrysler and its suppliers."

Both tax and regulatory relief would require congressional action.

In addition to Chrysler's own proposals, the government has been asked by the United Auto Workers to assume a $1 billion equity ownership interest in the company, implying a governmental voice in the company's operations in exchange for its investment.

The UAW, which has ruled out a strike against Chrysler in its current negotiations with the Big Three automakers, has also proposed "shop-floor-to-boardroom" worker participation in management decisions at Chrysler, similar to a plan the company offered British unions three years ago and to "codetermination" plans in many Western European countries.

Relief on the order of $1 billion for Chrysler would exceed vastly the controversial $250 million in loan guarantees that Congress voted for Lockheed Aircraft Corp. in 1971.

Chrysler, blamed its plight on sluggish sales, a limited supply of engines for its good-selling small cars, poor demand for its big supply of trucks and recreation vehicles and, above all, the burden of government regulations.

Soviet, China talks assured

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Negotiations between China and the Soviet Union on normalizing relations will begin in mid-September despite a recent border incident, Chinese and Soviet sources said Tuesday.

The sources said both sides are determined to continue with the talks as proposed by Peking in April although neither is convinced the other is seeking more than tactical benefits in its over-all foreign relationships.

Chinese sources said Peking has decided to leave aside for the moment Soviet objections to a proposal that negotiations alternate between the two capitals.

China wants the discussions to open in Moscow and then transfer to Peking after an initial period, which is still unspecified. The Kremlin has said they should continue to the end in Moscow.

The Chinese sources said Peking's delegation headed by newly-appointed Deputy Foreign Minister Wang Yuping, who until earlier this month was formally ambassador to the Soviet Union, would arrive around Sept. 10.

Citizens' Party gears for 1980

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ecologist Barry Commoner and other liberal activists are launching an alternative political party that will have its own candidate for president in the 1980 election.

Commoner, who is likely to be that candidate, planned to announce formation of the Citizens' Party at a news conference today.

Other major organizers are Maggie Kuhn of the Gray Panthers; author Studs Turkel; Archibald Gillies of the John Hay Whitney Foundation; Harriet Barlow of the Institute for Local Self-Reliance, and Dan Rose, who managed Chicago Mayor Jane Byrne's upset victory this year.

Gillies and Ms. Barlow head a steering committee with more than 100 members that will initially direct the party.

"From the grass-roots level, local chapters will be organized that will appoint representatives to the state committees," Gillies said.

He estimates the party will need from $2 million to $5 million to run a presidential campaign — money they hope to raise primarily from small contributions.

"The party is not being perceived as a left or right party by the old standards," said Gillies, a Republican. "The traditional premise is that we have a private economy operating through the market place and a centralized government that regulates and taxes it.

"That format is no longer applicable," he said. "Public interests must be asserted as the dominant area of decision making. We very much favor a decentralized government."

An energy policy will be one of the key issues of the new party, with committee members on record as favoring public ownership of utilities and a heavy reliance on solar policy.

But the Citizens' Party isn't banking on electing a president in 1980.

"We want to be established enough in 1980 to give the party a handle to raise itself to visibility," Ms. Barlow said.

Doomed DC-10 bolt nicked airline mechanics testify

ROSEMONT, Ill. (AP) — American Airlines mechanics have testified they found a nick on an engine support bolt in a DC-10 jetliner two months before it crashed on takeoff at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport on May 25.

Now, National Transportation Safety Board investigators want to find out whether that nick is related to a 25-centimetre-long crack which is believed to have caused the plane's left engine to fall off, resulting in the worst air disaster in U.S. history.

The mechanics testified Tuesday during the second day of hearings on the crash that they discovered the nick — but no other damage — during the plane's last major inspection.

The mechanics told NTSB investigators they spotted the small nick on the top of a supporting bolt that held the left pylon to the wing of the jet during an inspection in Tulsa, Okla., on March 29. The pylon attaches the wing to the engine.

Eight weeks later, the plane crashed when the left engine broke away from the wing shortly after takeoff. The disaster claimed 273 lives.

Mac Brown, an overhaul inspector at American's Tulsa workshop, said his mechanics reported the nick and repaired it.

Investigators asked whether the nick might indicate the support bolt struck the wing mounting during maintenance with enough force to cause the crack.

Dale Warren, a design engineer for McDonnell Douglas, which built the plane, said simulated laboratory tests failed to produce a similar crack after being struck six times by a powerful outside force.

Much of Tuesday's session focused on when the fatal crack developed in the bolting assembly but investigators are also trying to determine whether there was other structural damage that went undetected.

More American mechanics testified Tuesday that they and their colleagues often failed to follow airline instructions, which call for removing the pylon and engine as one unit.

Mechanic Brian Bricken explained why the mechanics did not follow the step-by-step instructions given them. "The way we do it is safer and more practical," he said.

Walrus protected

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The United States on Tuesday banned all unregulated hunting of the Pacific walrus until the state of Alaska reinstates controls concerning the marine mammal.

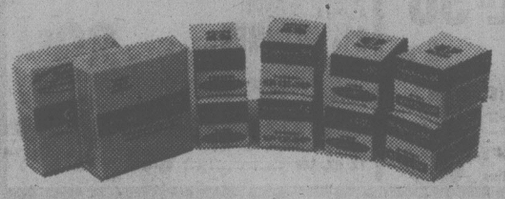

The emergency action by the interior department was taken after Alaska repealed most of its hunting regulations and other restrictions on the walrus July 1 and ended its enforcement activities.

The department's action suspends a waiver on a moratorium on the taking of the walrus under the Marine Mammal Protection Act. That act gave management of the walrus to Alaska after the state agreed to institute controls on hunting, killing and taking of walruses.

Tory knife slashes into legacy

LONDON (AP) — Calling it painful but necessary surgery, Margaret Thatcher's new Conservative government has moved swiftly to cut back the legacy of socialism left by previous Labor governments.

During their three months in office, the Tories have aimed the scalpel vigorously at upper-bracket income taxes, government spending, nationalized industries and state-supported commissions.

But Mrs. Thatcher makes no apology. She says she is "carrying out the voters' instructions."

Angered by a winter of strikes which the Labor government could not control and which curtailed hospital services, schools, garbage collections and the burial of the dead, the voters gave the Tories a commanding 43-seat majority in the 635-seat House of Commons.

Mrs. Thatcher wasted no time acting on her belief that business and management would lead the country to prosperity if taxes and government red tape were reduced.

In its first parliamentary term, which ended last week, her government:

—Cut the base rate of the income tax from 33 per cent to 30 per cent and the top rate from 83 per cent to 60 per cent. To make up for the loss in revenue, sales taxes were boosted 12.5 per cent on luxuries and eight per cent on most other goods and services to a uniform 15 per cent.

—Vowed to keep next year's public spending down to this year's level in real terms, which is expected to mean trimming more than $9 billion from the total planned by the previous Labor government.

—Boosted to 14 per cent the Bank of England's prime lending rate, on which all commercial interest rates are based, and eased restrictions on individuals and corporations sending and spending funds overseas.

The increase in the interest rate and North Sea oil production have boosted the pound sterling to a four-year high but the good news stops there.

The London Stock Exchange, which boomed in April on expectations of a Conservative victory in the election, has dropped 17 per cent. Inflation has risen from less than 10 percent to 11.4 per cent and government ministers predict it will hit 17.5 per cent before Jan. 1.

The latest Gallup Poll gives Labor a lead with the voters of five percentage points over the Conservatives, compared with a Tory lead of 7.2 percentage points three months ago.

Manufacturers complain the pound's new strength is making British exports more expensive abroad and reducing orders.

Labor leaders are upset by predictions that unemployment, now considered high at 5.2 per cent, will exceed six per cent.

And the toughest potential problem is still to be faced — the confrontation with the unions over wage increases and promised restrictions on strikers.

Thermostat clause 'guts' rationing bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House of Representatives is ready to give President Jimmy Carter the gasoline-rationing authority he wants but only at a price he may be unwilling to pay: Repeal of part of his month-old mandatory thermostat-setting program.

The rationing bill's floor manager, Representative John Dingell (Dem. Mich.), said Tuesday adoption of the thermostat-law rollback has added new controversy to the legislation and again put its passage in jeopardy.

And House leaders are no longer as optimistic that the legislation can be placed on the president's desk by the end of the week — the start of the month-long congressional summer recess.

The apparent rationing victory the House gave the president Tuesday night was short-lived. It was followed up by a 267-to-152 vote to repeal the law championed by Carter requiring commercial buildings to set their thermostats at no less than 78 degrees fahrenheit in the summer and no more than 65 degrees in winter.

Under the amendment, buildings would be exempt from the temperature control law if utility bills — or other documentary evidence — could be produced to show that an equivalent amount of energy had been saved through other means.

Backers said steps such as turning off lights at night or turning off other electrical devices are examples of a way that a building might save the same amount of energy as setting thermostats at 78 degrees.

The proposal would also allow buildings to be exempt from setting thermostats to 65 degrees in the winter if — as in the summer — an equivalent savings of energy could be documented.

Diggs back to normal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressman Charles Diggs returns to his normal duties today after becoming only the 19th member in the history of the republic to be censured by his colleagues in the House of Representatives.

The House voted Tuesday to censure the Michigan Democrat for financial misconduct.

While embarrassing to Diggs, the action has little, if any, practical effect on his congressional standing. He still retains his right to vote, his committee assignments and the perquisites that go with being a congressman.

He has no positions of power, having relinquished both his chairmanships after his federal court conviction last year on 29 counts of mail fraud and of making false statements.

Alpine death toll peaks

PARIS (UPI) — Fifty-one persons were killed in mountain-climbing accidents in the French Alps during July, the highest toll in recent years.

Authorities blamed the increase on large numbers of inexperienced vacationers who are trying their hand at climbing in the Alps, some of whose peaks are among the most difficult in the world.

The worst single accident occurred July 19 on Mount Blanc, Europe's highest mountain, where seven British, German and French climbers were killed and four injured when they fell into an ice crevasse.

U.S. making PLO deal?

By WALTER TAYLOR
Washington Star

WASHINGTON — The United States, again at odds with Israel over Middle East peace terms, has made repeated assurances over the past few days that it has no plans to open negotiations over establishment of an independent Palestinian state in territory now occupied by the Jewish state.

However, the tacit acknowledgement that the United States joined in efforts to put off until later this month a debate by the U.N. Security Council on Palestinian rights has fostered new speculation that efforts are under way to work out an accommodation with the Palestinian Liberation Organization.

Such speculation centred on various resolutions reportedly circulating at the United Nations that would meet the key U.S. condition for opening discussions with the PLO: acceptance by the Palestinians of Israel's right to exist.

At the State Department Tuesday, U.S. Spokesman Hodding Carter II again insisted there had been no change in American policy on contact with the PLO. Carter reiterated that two U.N. resolutions asserting Israel's legitimacy are "linchpins" of U.S. policy.

"We believe the resolutions are central . . . In the Middle East peace process, that to abandon those two would be a mistake," Carter said.

Sources familiar with the discussions said the same assurances have been made — and remade — during private discussions over the past few days between State Department officials and Israeli Ambassador Ephraim Evron. Israel regards the PLO as a terrorist organization and says it will not negotiate with it under any circumstances.

Despite such private and public assurances, however, the postponement of Tuesday's Security Council debate on Palestinian rights left open the possibility that language could be drafted to satisfy both the U.S. conditions for negotiations with the Palestinians and the PLO insistence on recognition for what it claims as its political rights.

The U.N. debate was rescheduled to begin Aug. 23.

Meanwhile, The New York Times reported Wednesday that the Carter administration, bowing to congressional objections, promised to delay arrangements to sell up to 300 modern tanks to Jordan.

Meier guilty

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — John Meier, former aide to the late billionaire Howard Hughes, was found guilty Tuesday of submitting false documents in an $8 million civil suit filed against him by Hughes Tool Co.

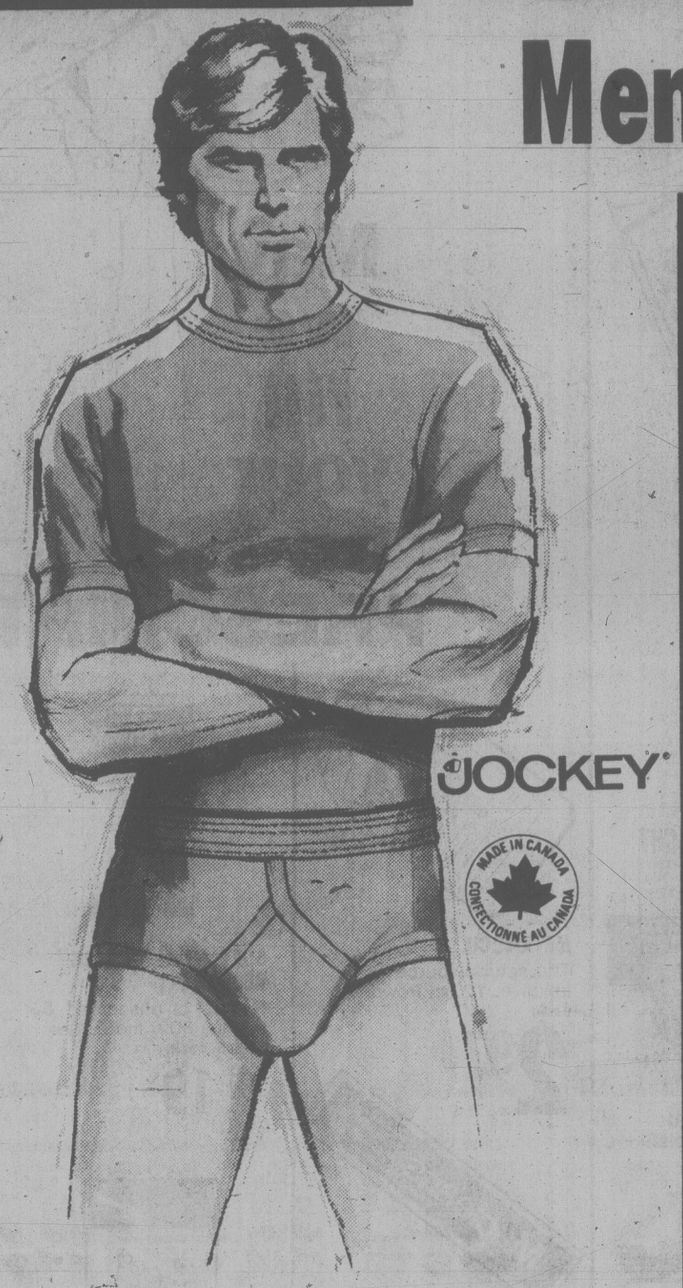

Meier remained in custody and is to be sentenced Aug. 24.

Meier, 45, was extradited from Canada to Utah to face the charge.

Racing, recovery resting: all part of sun fun for sports car buffs

LADY IN WAITING hangs around in the back of a van (far right) until the action starts at Victoria Motor Club's silver anniversary rally held at Western Speedway over the weekend. While she whiles away the hours lying in the sun, MGs and other sports cars line up for the qualifying round (right) and the track is cleared of vehicles that stalled on a turn (above). The event featured a full two days of activity.

Datsun drops city dealers

Two Victoria auto firms cited for good performance have had their new car dealer franchises cancelled by Nissan Automobile Co. (Canada) Ltd., manufacturer's agent for Datsun.

The dealers are McCallum Motors Ltd. and Three Point Motors Ltd., both of which have other new car franchises.

Nissan told the firms they will no longer allow their dealers to sell other makes. Both dealers refused to give up their second lines. McCallum is a Volvo dealer and Three Point sells Mercedes Benz.

They held the Datsun franchise for nine years, between them selling about 600 new cars a year, and were frequent winners of sales, parts and service awards. McCallum and Three Point will continue servicing Datsun products.

A spokesman said Nissan insisted on its policy against the wishes of the former minister for trade and commerce and other dealers across the country. U.S. franchise laws, it was pointed out, prevent this kind of control over dual dealerships.

$10,000 loss in barn blaze

A barn blaze started by a grass fire was fought Tuesday afternoon by three Saanich firehalls and the View Royal volunteer fire department.

The loss is estimated at $10,000, including $3,500 in stored lumber. Hay also was stored in the barn. An adjacent barn also was damaged.

Barbara Saegebrecht, 1568 West Burnside, first reported the grass fire near a barn owned by Michael Perey, 1571 West Burnside, which is almost directly across the road from her home.

She turned in the alarm about 4:30 p.m. after a neighbor, Peter Pridmore of 1490 West Burnside, spotted the blaze.

Mrs. Saegebrecht and Pridmore dashed to the barn which was in flames by that time but were driven back by the heat.

Hot ashes started grass fires in other lots. Youngsters and passersby used wet sacks and hoses to help stamp out the fires.

The barn was engulfed when firemen arrived. They got the fire under control, safeguarding other buildings in the area at the same time.

Saanich fireman Mike Gibson was overcome by heat exhaustion during the hour-long battle.

UVic funds stalled

Technicalities have fouled up the transfer of federal funds from provincial coffers to the University of Victoria for co-operative education programs.

Assistant deputy education minister Andrew Soles explained on Tuesday the legislature has not given the ministry the authority to spend any money received from the federal government for the program.

Students (all of them above average) in the affected program alternate academic and work terms.

The program is popular with students and employers.

As the funds are one-time grants, they weren't included in the provincial ministry's "line by line" budget, meaning they can't be paid out to UVic or any other university in B.C. offering the program.

309 IN MEMORIAM

BLANDFORD — Terry Wayne, born August 4, 1956. Died August 1, 1974.
Terry:
The years have slipped by, since you went away.
Still we think of you almost each day.
Sadly missed, Mother, Dad and Dale.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

God in his wisdom has recalled
The boon
his love had given
And though the body slumbers here
The soul is safe in heaven.

GARDENING

Signs of the season showing best now

An early morning in August is ideal for noting progress of the season. Signs can be found in municipal parks, along wayside trails as well as in small or large private gardens.

The theme is progress — going forward to the new and different — not to be confused with the end of something familiar.

Summer does not end abruptly, it is now merging its splendors of garden and wayside with the lesser vibrancy of fall, which as we must recall has its own momentary excitements of color even in coastal plant life.

Already we find it of interest to see that tight clusters of Laurustinus buds (Viburnum tinus) are in every twig tip on the north end of shrubs in the open. This is a sign that they will be again activated in the earliest spring days as the hours of daylight reach about the same number as those of say, mid August, although some will be stimulated in mild spells at any time after the winter solstice in December. Notice that portions of these shrubs now in full sun do not show the tiny bud development yet.

Berries have already reached more than half size on the earliest flowering cotoneasters. They will show little sign of turning red until birds begin their southward flights as the days cool. The present size of the crops promise plenty for all by the time winter residents are in need of food.

It could be the effect of the trailing stems ripening early as they lie on the hot cement walk this year, but it is a bit strange to see flower buds on the white winter heather on August first.

At the same time it is comforting to see that flower buds are slowly forming on early blooming rhododendrons. It is well known that these lovely plants need plenty of summer sunshine to ripen the new growths made after spring bloom.

During summer they need steady moisture at their roots. Now the results are becoming visible.

August is the month we normally begin to reduce the amount of water given to shrubs, but unless there has been a steady supply all summer with a reserve in the soil at their roots, we shall need to just reduce the amount now, not quit entirely. The rainless summer following the dry spring has resulted in a totally dry subsoil; there is nothing below to be drawn upwards.

If rain takes over this month, it will likely be safe to quit shrub watering by month end. Exceptions will be small and newly planted to encourage new rooting before cold weather.

But to look for seasonal signs of progression, we note the B.C. native Douglas-aster with mauve flowers on waste lots and roadsides. It flowers three to four weeks ahead of those garden asters which have been raised from eastern North American natives.

The earliest of the species aster to flower in Victoria gardens is one whose tiny dots of flower buds can now be seen. This will open into trees and shrubs of all kinds which need damp, warm soil sheets of soft lavender bloom before the end of August.

With all these signs of progress toward a new season there can be no regrets at the passing of early summer, for the best is yet to come.

In even a relatively small garden there can be plants to bring beauty and the excitement of progress to each season and indeed to each month of the year.

There is no end and no beginning, there is only the progress of the cycle of life.

Kinsmen named

Ted Eby has been elected president of the Victoria Kinsmen club for 1979 - 1980.

The new vice-president is Jean Clutchey, secretary is Tom Mahar, and treasurer is Bob Garland.

Tony Whiles was elected registrar.

The new directors will be Ian Birch, Mel Brotzel, and Stu Carter.

The Kinsmen club is a non-profit organisation serving community needs.

FINAL STRAW in record-setting contraption built by Halifax youngsters is added by Mike Herasimanko (straw in mouth) while the others help support it. The youngsters say the 27,25-metre-long device took 180 plastic straws to build and they also say they can actually suck fluids through it. They're hoping for a spot in the Guinness Book of World Records.

Victoria art gallery sweeps print awards

Seven awards were won by the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria in a recent competition for publications by museums and galleries between Winnipeg and Victoria.

The competition was hosted by the Western Canadian Art Association in connection with its annual general meeting in Edmonton. There were 58 entries in the form of books, posters and newsletters. Twenty prizes were given and the Victoria entries virtually swept the field.

The grand prize for the most beautiful book in the contest was won by The Calligraphy of Kan Makiko, a 72-page book which reproduces all the works in an exhibition of Japanese "handwriting" by Miss Makiko who is one of the most famous of contemporary Japanese calligraphers.

The binding is hand-sewn in the oriental tradition.

Six other publications of the gallery staff received honorable mentions. The full-color print Love Mandala, by Victoria artist Jack Wise, won a prize, as did also a handsome poster designed by Chris Bitten for last summer's exhibit, Sophia Theresa Pemberton.

Nichola Tuele's biography of Sophie Pemberton, Victoria's first native-born professionally trained artist, was also chosen for honors. Arts Victoria, a bi-montly magazine sent to gallery members, was singled out for an award, attesting to the substantial and interesting contents of this unique publication.

Finally, the witty work of Opal L. Nations, shown at the gallery last year, received notice. The books and posters were all produced by Morriss Printers.

The prize winning items are all available at the gallery at 1040 Moss.

Pianist off to New York

American pianist Abbey Simon has left Victoria to return to New York, Victoria International Festival and Shawnigan Summer School of the Arts director J.J. Johannesen has announced.

He will be replaced at the school and in the festival roster of artists by Bela Siki, a pianist of wide reputation who is a member of the music faculty at the University of Washington. Siki has been guest soloist with the Victoria Symphony Orchestra.

He will participate in the second Keyboard Opulence program at University Centre auditorium on Saturday.

Another special, not previously scheduled event in this concert will be the joining of Ruth Laredo and Jacques Rouvier — pianist of the Rouvier-Kantorow-Muller Trio — in a performance of Schubert's piano fantasia for four hands.

Victim identified

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — Franklin Gerald Atkins, 49, of Vancouver has been identified by police as the man who drowned last week while swimming in Sprout Lake.

PUBLIC NOTICE ROYAL COMMISSION OF INQUIRY INTO URANIUM MINING

PUBLIC HEARINGS

The following Commissioners were appointed in accordance with the British Columbia Public Inquiries Act:

Dr. David V. Bates, Chairman
Dr. James W. Murray
Mr. Valter Raudsepp

Within the Terms of Reference, the Commissioners are to inquire into the adequacy of existing measures to provide protection in all aspects of uranium mining in British Columbia. In particular, they are to examine the adequacy of existing Federal and Provincial requirements in British Columbia for:

(a) The protection of the health and safety of workers associated with exploration, mining and milling of uranium, and
(b) The protection of the environment, and
(c) The protection of the Public.

On completion of the Inquiry, the Commissioners will make recommendations to the Lieutenant-Governor in Council for setting and maintaining standards for workers and public safety, and for protection of the environment in respect to exploration, mining and milling of uranium ores.

The Commissioners have completed their initial series of Community Hearings and on-site inspections of uranium deposits. Further Community Hearings will be scheduled early in 1980.

PHASING OF TECHNICAL HEARINGS

The Technical Hearings are to be held in accordance with the following schedule:

I.	OVERVIEW Natural Geochemical and Radiation Background and Deposits in British Columbia.	1979 September 25-28

Blackjack dealing a little rusty? Nevada college teaches it

RENO, Nev. (AP) — The art of dealing cards for blackjack involves more than tossing out cards and being able to count to 21.

In fact, it's taken seriously enough to be offered as a college course at one school here.

Western Nevada Community College is the only college or university in this gambling state — or the country — that teaches a person how to deal blackjack.

Students learn how to deal the card game in a regular classroom at the college. But instead of desks, students sit at blackjack tables.

The three-credit class costs $75 for 60 hours of instruction. The credits can be applied toward an associate degree at the college.

Dealing blackjack professionally requires special training to learn techniques, terminology and smoothness. Most casinos do not allow persons to deal cards without prior instruction or experience. Others prefer to train dealers themselves.

Carolyn Keller, the course's instructor, says the course makes sense since "that's how most persons are making their income around this state." Gambling is Nevada's No. 1 industry.

Keller, a dealer at a downtown casino, has been in the gaming industry for about 27 years. During that time, she has worked as a dealer, pit supervisor and instructor.

The gambling-related curriculum might eventually be extended to other courses, such as roulette and baccarat, but nothing definite has been decided, she says.

The college doesn't guarantee employment when the course is completed, but Keller says several graduates have found dealing jobs.

She adds that some students — many already in other casino employment — sign up for the class just to get a dealing job. Others are earning credits toward a college degree.

Flying saucers capture Russian imagination

By CRAIG R. WHITNEY
c. 1979 N.Y.Times News Service

MOSCOW — In this society of Scientific Socialism, there are some people who believe in Communism but not in God. There are others who believe in God but not in Communism. But all of them seem to believe in flying saucers.

Soviet science has put more men into space than United States technology has, but it has been unable to stamp out the advanced art form of the Russian rumor. Though two Soviet astronauts are even now circling the earth in man's longest space research mission, their countrymen persist in believing that they may be menaced or visited up there by beings from outer space.

"Why has the United States never published the whole story of the landing on the moon? " the director of one of Moscow's most serious and respected cultural institutions asked an American friend recently.

What whole story? the American innocently asked.

"The flying saucers that landed next to Apollo 11 on the moon," the Russian replied with assurance. "Your astronauts took pictures of them, the saucers photographed the Apollo craft. Why was the news suppressed?"

Suppression of news is also an advanced art the Soviet Union, so it is easy for flying-saucer believers to be confident that official denials mean nothing. Besides, a student who was also in on the Apollo secret said, one of the astronauts later suffered mental depression, probably because of the trauma of the saucer incident.

Col. Edwin E. Aldrin Jr., who followed Neil Armstrong's first steps on the moon on July 20, 1969, did have mental health problems after the Apollo mission, but he saw no flying saucers. Russians greet this sort of assertion from their American friends with knowing, unbelieving smiles.

Pictures of flying saucer apparitions over Soviet territory circulate among the intelligentsia the way underground literature circulates among dissidents.

"It's only logical that intelligent beings from other worlds are trying to make contact with us," said a leading poet not long ago. He pulled out two snapshots of vaguely saucer-shaped objects that were said to have appeared last August over Petrozavodsk in north European Russia.

Another writer says he was visited by extraterrestrial beings at his home in the forest. But he says he took them seriously. As a token of their good faith, he adds, they gave him a mathematical formula that they said unlocked the secret of space flight by tapping the energy from stellar light. The writer says he himself did not understand the formula but he gave it to scientists who examined it and pronounced it genuine.

Some critics of Soviet society who do not believe in flying saucers say such rumors spring from a crisis of faith in the official Communist ideology. Having no belief left, the critics say, people turn instead to superstition, prejudice and nationalistic feeling.

A musician says he was on a night flight to eastern Siberia recently when he looked out the window and saw three bright lights — flying saucers — hovering just beyond the wingtip.

"I woke up the people in front of me, and they looked out and saw it, too," he said. "I was so fascinated I just watched for half an hour. But when I looked up again, everybody else in the plane had gone back to sleep."

He was disappointed. But for most Russians, being shown that you can believe in flying saucers is about as routine and unsurprising as being shown that you cannot believe what you read in Pravda every day. Everybody knows it, so why be surprised?

Brain swap a tall tale?

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Dr. Robert White, Director of Neurosurgery at Cleveland Metropolitan General Hospital, has denied his hospital has a team of surgeons preparing to carry out a human head transplant or that his department ever did research toward transplanting a human brain.

"Our research never was or is set up for that purpose," Dr. White said. "Past research never set up to prepare for human brain transplant."

White was commenting on a statement in Cape Town, South Africa, by heart transplant pioneer Dr. Christiaan Barnard that he rejected a $250,000 offer from the National Enquirer to assist in the transplantation of a human head from one body to another.

Under the offer, Barnard said, he would have acted as a consultant to a group of American neurosurgeons who have successfully transplanted the heads of hundreds of dogs, rats and monkeys from one body to another at the Cleveland Metropolitan General Hospital.

White said that years ago Metropolitan General did perform brain experiments on rats and monkeys. "These experiments were related to specific scientific questions dealing with low temperature, immunology and neurochemistry (of the brain), but they were not programmed for developing operative techniques to transplant the human brain."

"There is only a vestige of that research tract left," White said.

At the height of the research, he said there were "well under 100 experiments done and probably only about 35."

White added that "We've had no contact from South Africa or the famous Dr. Barnard." He said he was not aware of the Enquirer offer to Barnard and branded as "false" the report about his hospital's research to transplant a human brain.

King honored

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. House has voted to put a statue or bust of Martin Luther King Jr. in the Capitol. It would be the first work of art in Congress to honor any black American.

The vote was 408-11, although the only stated opposition during a brief debate was from Rep. John Ashbrook, R-Ohio, who said a better person could have been picked to honor black Americans.

The resolution, which now goes to the Senate, would authorize up to $25,000 from the House contingency fund for the project. All details would be worked out later by the Joint Committee on the Library.

Fuel injector a slow starter

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — The inventor of a device that enables cars to run on lower-octane gasoline by injecting alcohol into the engine says he proved 30 years ago that the gadget works to stretch gasoline mileage.

But nobody paid much attention, until now.

"We used to have trouble getting our results published," said William Roth, a government scientist with the U.S. agriculture department.

A device patented by Roth and co-worker James Porter in 1948 places in the car a separate fuel tank containing a mixture of alcohol and water. Under normal driving conditions, the car uses low-octane gas. When it needs more power, the mixture is sprayed into the intake manifold as a booster.

"Alcohol-water injection would allow 65 to 70-octane gasoline to replace 87 to 89 octane," he said. "This would save petroleum. More low-octane than high-octane gasoline can be made from available crude, and low octane should cost less."

Roth claims his device would also improve mileage.

"The injector works, but I question these mileage figures," said Jim Feeney, an engineer for Standard Oil in Chicago. "If you pay $85 for this thing, do you ever get your money back? It's hard to say."

Norman Wagg, a research engineer who makes his own version of the injector, says his tests show the device yields fuel savings of 20 per cent.

"One of these days, Washington is going to wake up and require that these things be put in every car," said Waag.

'Jockey boys' vanishing breed

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — "Jockey boy" statues have been disappearing from lawns of Hartford-area homes, and the "Black Jockey Liberation Army" says it will keep taking the lawn ornaments until it has removed all forms of bigotry.

Although the culprits have not been caught, it appears a small network of people has decided the black-faced statues represent lingering racism and should be removed.

At least a dozen thefts have been reported to police since June. Usually, the statues depicting black youths, often in a red vest and cap and holding a lantern or a ring for tethering a horse, have wound up in the nearby Simsbury dump.

In nearly every case, the culprits have left behind a note signed by the "Black Jockey Liberation Army."

Authorities say the wording has been virtually identical to one note that said: "'tis the goal of our army to wipe clean the face of the earth and remove all forms of bigotry."

"It's a symbol," said Ben Hunsanger, a 27-year-old groundskeeper at a local cemetery. "You have a little black person waiting at the door."

He and two friends say they haven't taken the statues. But Hunsanger, who is white, says they have been venturing forth at night to hang signs on the figures that warn: "You're Next — End Racism."

Dye disturbing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A controversial theory that food additives can contribute to hyperactivity in children has received new support from government experiments indicating an artificial food dye can affect the brain.

Dr. Ellen K. Silbergeld said Monday her research at the National Institute of Neurological and Communicative Disorders and Stroke is the first laboratory evidence of a link between food colorings and hyperactivity.

But she said that while the test-tube study was provocative, "it doesn't prove that dyes in our food can affect the brain" because it is not known if the dyes reach the brain in animals. She said additional research is needed.

Dr. Silbergeld reported in the July 27 issue of Science magazine that laboratory experiments showed the dye known as Red No. 3, also called erythrosin B, partially prevents rat brain cells from taking in dopamine, a natural substance in brain cells.

The institute said dopamine is known to have a profound effect on human moods and movement.

Arrival of Boat People spells fear of Third World disease

By EVAN MAXWELL
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Hundreds of thousands of Third World immigrants entering the United States are bringing with them a panoply of communicable diseases that could, according to health experts, move the country back toward 19th century standards of public health.

These diseases can be readily contained with the traditional tools of public health - treatment, immunization, vector control and, particularly, health education, the experts agree.

But the entry of new, poor, largely uneducated immigrants — whether refugee "Boat People" or illegal Mexican and Latin American aliens — comes at a time when local public health programs are being drastically cut back or seriously overextended.

Up to now, the focus of the debate over immigration and public health has been on costs and on the strain exerted on local health facilities by illegal aliens. But now, many public health experts believe the communicable disease problem has become so significant that control must be exerted without reference to cost.

"We are not talking about the health of the Vietnamese refugee or the undocumented Mexican worker or even the health of his family," said one senior Los Angeles County public health official. "We are talking about the impact on the health of the entire community."

Indications of the scope of the problem in Southern California are widespread:

— Tuberculosis in Los Angeles County and in Orange County, to the south, is increasing significantly at a time when TB rates in other parts of the country are declining.

— Malaria cases in California have been doubling annually for the last three years, with the majority of cases involving recent immigrants from underdeveloped countries.

— Los Angeles County has no indigenous leprosy, but in 1978, 255 cases were reported to county health officials. That amounted to a 10-fold increase since 1964. A nearly nine-fold increase, from six cases to 53, was reported in typhoid during the same period.

Of the various communicable diseases involved in the problem, tuberculosis is by far the most serious, according to most of the experts interviewed, and Los Angeles seems to be more seriously effected by TB than almost any other large city in the country.

According to a report prepared by Dr. Matthew O. Lock, director of tuberculosis control for Los Angeles County, 1,478 cases of tuberculosis were reported here in 1977. That represents an increase of 10 per cent over the cases reported in 1970, the report said.

"While this may not appear alarming, it is significant that during the same time period, the number of cases reported in the United States decreased 19 per cent, and even more dramatic decreases were noted in Chicago (26 per cent) and in New York City (37 per cent)," the report said.

"We all but eradicated the disease in the 1950s," said California Representative Edward Roybal,whose first public job 30 years ago was as a TB health educator. "Since then, we have had a low incidence here, and any outbreak was usually taken care of rather quickly.

"But now in the last few years, we have seen this sharp increase in TB and in other diseases associated with poverty."

Among these other diseases, experts cite a variety of gastro-intestinal parasites and conditions. "We are talking about people with a high degree of communicable disease," said Ramon Salcido, assistant professor of social work at the University of Southern California.

"Salmonella, shigella, amoebic disorders — these are all Third World kinds of health problems," he said:

"They were 19th century problems in this country and that complicates matters because modern, industrialized medicine is not always equipped to recognize them or to deal with them."

Other experts cite hepatitis and typhoid as significant problems, along with such relatively routine diseases as measles and such exotic, although less communicable, maladies as leprosy.

Most of the recent public health attention has focused on the sudden influx of Indochinese refugees, whose numbers are now approaching 250,000 in this country and who are to be entering soon at the rate of 14,000 a month.

In 100 years we'll all shuttle

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In 100 years, airlines will operate space shuttles and a flight into orbit will cost "well below today's cruise-ship fares," the former head of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration predicts.

Calling it the "High Frontier," Dr. Thomas Paine told a civic luncheon: "Space is doing better than nuclear power."

And although there may at present be a crisis in energy and the economy, he said, mankind has begun a "golden age of science."

Paine, president of Northrop Corp., headed NASA from 1968 through 1970, presiding over the first seven Apollo space flights and the first moon landing.

Paine predicted "major manned facilities for spacecraft docking, checkout, servicing, cargo and passenger transfer and spaceships on voyages to destinations throughout the solar system."

Coroner's juries face new curbs

VANCOUVER (CP) - Inquest juries in British Columbia will no longer be allowed to place blame for a death and will be monitored more closely to ensure they are conducted correctly, says the province's new chief coroner.

Dr. William MacArthur said in an interview that it is inappropriate for a coroners' jury to find negligence when it is the responsibility of the courts and professional groups to rule in such cases.

He said inquests now will come under the close scrutiny of the Coroners' Act which was introduced in March at the same time MacArthur began his newly-created position.

"Finding who is to blame is not terribly productive in preventing another similiar incident," said MacArthur. "If it appears from evidence in a hearing that there is wrongdoing on a part of a professional person, or any person, it would be turned over to whoever is appropriate."

The terms of the new act state the jury shall not make any findings of legal responsibility or express any conclusions of law.

Any juries which try to attach blame will be sent back to reconsider, said MacArthur, and if they persist in finding blame, "they will be discharged and a new hearing called."

Juries will still have the power, however, to state whether something was done incorrectly and further action, if warranted, will proceed from there.

MacArthur said that if an inquest jury's recommendations are not acted on, there is nothing it can do except rely on public pressure.

He said it remains to be seen whether the system will work and added if it doesn't, further changes will have to be made to the law.

Under the new legislation, anyone who testifies at an inquest has automatic protection from prosecution on the basis of what he tells the hearing. Previously, inquest witnesses who wanted to avoid legal responsibility for their testimony had to specifically ask protection under the Canada Evidence Act.

MacArthur also said he deplores the practice of using inquests as a form of preliminary hearing for a criminal case.

"I won't tolerate that," he said.

"It is contrary to the public interest that inquests be used as a method of gathering evidence for criminal trials. There is a process called examination of discovery for that."

Missing boy

City police are appealing to the public for help in locating a missing 12-year-old boy.

Sgt. John Maybin, head of the community services division, said today Cecil Creighton left the apartment of his father, Frank Creighton, 406-118 Croft, on July 22 and hasn't been seen since.

Maybin said the boy has a history of running away but has never before been missing for this length of time.

The boy is described as native Indian, four feet, 10 inches tall, 85 pounds, with shoulder-length black hair. He was believed wearing dark brown corduroy pants, brown running shoes and a light blue windbreaker.

Anyone with information is asked to contact Maybin at 384-4111.

Nimpkish Indian Band leaders at Alert Bay have decided against co-operating with a special co-ordinator appointed by Health Minister Robert McClelland.

Band lawyer Harry Rankin said Tuesday the band took the decision on his recommendation because they do not believe they need someone to mediate.

"There's no advantage in dealing with some missionary. There's no need for mediation. There's no disagreement or personality problem," Rankin said.

Eric Powell, an Anglican minister, began looking into medical problems two weeks ago in an attempt to bring local residents and hospital authorities closer together.

The community has been in turmoil since the death of an 11-year-old girl in St. George's Hospital.

A coroner's jury found Dr. Jack Pickup negligent in that death. He was later judged to be competent by the College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Rankin and the Nimpkish Band had asked the provincial government to conduct a full public inquiry into medical services.

Says Rankin: "There should be a full public inquiry into the roots of the problem, into the reasons why they have had inadequate medical service for the last 10 to 15 years."

Instead of co-operating with Powell, the band will concentrate its efforts on preparing its position for federal Health Minister David Crombie. He has agreed to visit the village later this month.

They will ask him to conduct a federal inquiry into medical care and to fund a doctor through Indian Affairs.

Workers settle at BCTV

BURNABY (CP) — Workers at British Columbia Television have voted 59 per cent in favor of accepting a two-year contract.

The agreement for the 170 workers at CHAN-TV in Burnaby and CHEK-TV in Victoria is retroactive to Feb. 28. The workers are represented by the National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians.

The contract provides for wage increases of 10 per cent in the first year and nine per cent in the second for senior employees. Junior classifications will receive a nine-per-cent increase in the first year and eight per cent in the second. Base rates were unavailable.

The contract also provides for an additional three holidays a year and other fringe benefits.

A major stumbling block was the company's decision to do some of the production of its Alan Hamel Show in Los Angeles using U.S. workers.

Fall kills youth

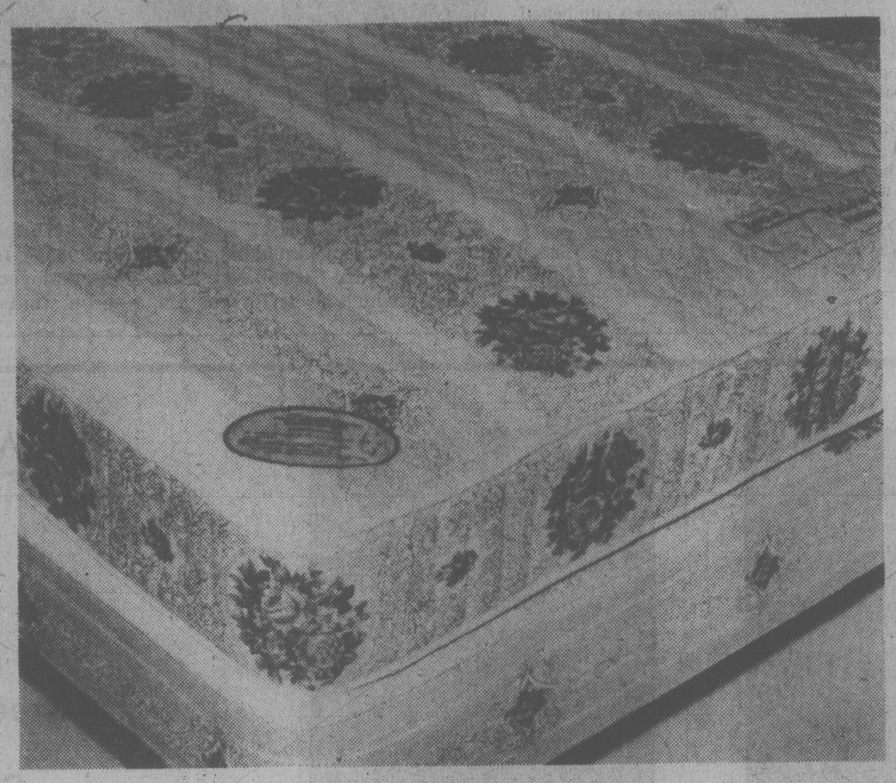

KELOWNA (CP) — A 14-year-old Kelowna boy who fell from the paddlewheeler Fintry Queen July 19 and hit his head on a metal wheel support has died in hospital.

Police said James Garnet Nelsom was diving from the paddlewheeler on Okanagan Lake when he slipped and fell.

Jane Bangay points to window where baby fell

After three-floor plunge . . . baby only winded

An 18-month-old boy escaped injury in a 35-foot fall from an apartment window in Victoria West Tuesday night.

Eric Hunter was only winded in the mishap that occurred at about 6:30 p.m. in front of a four-storey apartment at 310 Roberts. He was kept in Victoria General Hospital overnight for observation but was expected to be released later today.

The boy's mother, Carol Hunter, 28, was working in the kitchen of her third-floor suite when she got a telephone call from a resident in the block.

"Hey, your little kid just fell out a window," Mrs. Hunter quoted the caller as saying.

She said the boy had gone into a bedroom where she thought he was playing with the family's cats.

He apparently climbed on to a laundry hamper near a window, climbed out to the sill and slipped.

Jack and Vivian Bangay, who live in an apartment one floor below, were on their balcony when they saw the fall. The boy landed on the grass, belly-first.

The Bangay's 15-year-old daughter, Jane, leaped from the family's second-floor balcony to the ground 15 feet below, picked up the unconscious boy and starting pumping him on the back in an attempt to revive him.

Jane's father applied mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

"All of a sudden he opened his eyes and looked at us sort of wild-like," Jane said. "Then he began to cry."

Mrs. Hunter said Eric had just started to crawl and climb.

"He knows up and out," she said, "but that's the first down he's experienced.

"I think he's going to live a long life. He'll live until he's an old, old man."

Dairy prices jump

Butter, cheese, milk powder

OTTAWA (CP) — Butter, cheese, ice cream and skim milk powder prices will start going up next week, the result of increased returns to dairy farmers announced today by Agriculture Minister John Wise.

Butter will cost at least five cents a pound more and skim milk powder will increase at least two cents a pound, officials said. They could not say how great increases in cheese prices will be but they will come into effect gradually.

Table milk prices are not affected by the increase because they are regulated by provincial agencies.

The announcement came at the start of so-called dairy year, a 12-month period for which a national production level is set for industrial or manufacturing milk used to make dairy products.

Wise also announced that each province is being allowed an additional three-per-cent quota for industrial milk for the production of evaporated milk, whole milk and cheese for export except to the United States and the European Economic Community.

If all provinces took their share, it would mean an additional three million hundredweights of milk.

The export program could cost the dairy commission an extra $4 million a year. But a spokesman said the money will come out of savings the commission has been able to make in its export program.

Wise presented the export program to a meeting of provincial agriculture ministers in New Brunswick last week. Several provinces have said they would like the additional quota, a spokesman said.

The butter support price paid by the Canadian dairy commission will rise five cents to $1.42 a pound and the skim milk subsidy will climb 2.5 cents to 83.5 cents a pound.

The target return to farmers, in effect an indicator of what processors should pay dairy farmers, increases 38 cents to $13.67 cents a hundredweight today.

AirCan cuts fares for fall

TORONTO (UPC) — Passengers flying to destinations in excess of 1,600 kilometres on Air Canada this fall will enjoy fare reductions ranging from 48 to 68 per cent.

The fare cut, which first must be approved by the government, is similar to the airline's successful spring program and will operate between Sept. 24 and Nov. 23 to destinations within Canada and the United States.

The airline hopes to to announce fare reductions for short-haul trips at a later date.

CP Air is studying the Air Canada package and will have an announcement soon, possibly by Thursday, a spokesman for that airline said.

To qualify for the low-cost tickets, passengers will have to: book 30 days in advance; stay a minimum of seven days; purchase tickets no later than seven days after reservations are made, except for those made between Aug. 1-24, which must be purchased by Aug. 31; complete return travel no no later than 30 days after the outward journey.

Passengers already holding charter class seats for the period of the sale will be allowed to purchase tickets at sale price upon payment of a $20 fee.

Row over Rhodesia erupts at conference

Times News Services

LUSAKA — Britain today told the opening session of the Commonwealth conference summit it is seeking "genuine" black majority rule in Zimbabwe-Rhodesia, but Australia and Zambia warned that the current solution of a basically-black legislature would never find acceptance.

"We still have white power clothed in black," Zambian leader Kenneth Kaunda said and warned that in the end "Africa will win the war" against Bishop Abel Muzorewa, black prime minister of Zimbabwe Rhodesia.

The clash came as Nigeria nationalized the British share in a jointly-operated oil in what appears to be the start of a major drive to force Britain to change its policy on Zimbabwe-Rhodesia.

The British delegation to the Lusaka conference, headed by new Conservative Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, called the Nigerian action an "extraordinary move."

A delegation spokesman rejected what it said was a Nigerian explanation linking the move to the sale of British oil to South Africa.

"Taking into account the timing of this extraordinary move on the eve of the Commonwealth meeting, the British government can suppose only that the real reason for the Nigerian action is something entirely different," he said.

The takeover involves the 20 per cent share of British Petroleum in the combined Nigerian-Royal Dutch Shell-BP oil company. Nigeria already owned 60 per cent of the company, with Shell and BP evenly sharing the remainder.

Nigeria has threatened Britain and the United States with economic retaliation if they lift sanctions against the Muzorewa government.

Nigeria is the second largest exporter of oil to the United States and has surpassed South Africa as Britain's largest trading partner.

With its oil wealth and burgeoning economy, Nigeria is regarded as the major — and perhaps only — African weapon in attempting to prevent the West from accepting Zimbabwe-Rhodesia government, which guarantees the 250,000 whites a privileged role in the population of 7 million.

It appered that Nigeria may have begun a broad attack on the British economy. The pound dropped six cents to $2.25 (U.S.) on European exchange markets overnight and some dealers blamed Nigeria, saying it was offering to sell upward of 500 million pounds.

Sterling, however, rebounded to $2.27 U.S. by noon today.

The Nigerian announcement said BP had been told that it would be compensated, but there was no immediate indication of the amount.

Even though Tuesday's Nigerian actions were limited to Britain, the fallout could have an impact in the U.S. where Congress has been pressuring President Jimmy Carter to lift sanctions against Zimbabwe-Rhodesia, a move than could conceivably lead to similar Nigerian action against the United States.

1,000 suites blaze

HOUSTON (AP) — Fire swept through a huge, wood-shingled apartment complex Tuesday, destroying hundreds of fashionable apartments and leaving residents stunned and homeless.

Houston Fire Chief V. E. Rogers described it as the worst blaze in his 24 years on the force.

At the height of the fire more than 35 buildings were in flames but no one was killed, authorities said.

As many as 1,000 of the 1,100 apartments were destroyed. Officials estimate that up to 1,500 persons are homeless.

As darkness fell, some victims of the fire arranged salvaged items of furniture on a tennis court to provide beds for the night.

Tories stop PetroCan representing Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — The Progressive Conservative government has dealt Petro-Canada out of international oil transactions, an aide to Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn said today.

The aide said that the Conservative government no longer wants the Crown agency to be involved in state-to-state transactions.

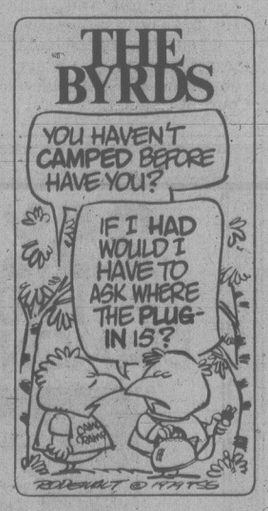

He said neither Mexico nor Venezuela, countries with which Canada is discussing oil imports, have any objection to dealing with some other Crown agency.

The government now is considering how to live up to its May 22 election pledge to put Petro-Canada into private hands.

The aide said that it is hoped a committee of trustees to determine the future of the agency will be appointed in the next few weeks. The committee might be in a position to report by the end of the year.

Liberals and New Democrats reiterated Tuesday pledges to fight government Petro-Canada plans. Marc Lalonde, Liberal energy critic, said he will seek caucus approval to move a motion on non-confidence in the minority government.

The Joe Clark government now is following up on two actions by the previous Liberal government: Sewing up a deal with Mexico under which 100,000 barrels of oil a day eventually will be sold to Canada.

MLAs hustle pay hike as dull session closes

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

The B.C. legislature prorogued with a bang Tuesday but not before whimpering along for most of the two-month session that was noted more for its desultory debate than for significant legislation.

The bang came when members looked at the clock, saw it was close to the normal 6 p.m. adjournment time and took an almost indecently short 12 minutes to vote themselves a 31 per cent pay raise.

There was no debate and not a whisper of constraint from a single MLA in the 57-member house over the raise that will cost taxpayers about half a million dollars annually.

Although debate in the last few days picked up noticably, most members left for their abbreviated summer vacation wondering why the business took so long to wrap up.

Both the throne speech and the $4.56 billion budget were recycled versions of the attempt earlier in the spring to hold a legislative session — one that lasted nine days before the election call.

When the new session began June 6, the Socred ranks were reduced to 31. They faced a rejuvenated NDP bench of 26 members.

At the end, Premier Bill Bennett said the session accomplished his aim of further shifting taxation off the people and industry and getting more from resources.

Opposition leader Dave Barrett said the government has done nothing to stimulate employment, alleviate unemployment or increase financing for hospitals.

In its 38 sitting days, the legislature approved 34 government bills and two rarely accepted private member's bills.

Much of the new legislation simply implemented proposals in the budget and enacted at least some of the Socred promises made during the May 10 election campaign.

Many others were housekeeping matters, updating or removing old statutes, some of which had been on the books since Queen Victoria's time.

Among the half dozen or so significant new bills are:

— Amendments to the B.C. Resources Investment Act which allowed the free share giveaway and additional sale of shares in the Crown corporation with major holdings in the province.

— Amendments to the Constitution Act giving MLAs their first pay boost in seven years, raising salaries to $21,000 per year and tax free expense allowances to $10,500 among other benefits including indexed raises in the future.

— An act ending age, sex, marital status and geographic location in setting auto insurance rates.

— The contentious bill the NDP claim will be the sleeper of the session that establishes a super-society to de-

Worms force Safeway fish return

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Safeway stores in Victoria have shipped all their fresh fish stocks back to the packing house for re-examination after a shopper found three live worms in a package of cod fillets.

District manager Jack Fidler said today he has asked the packing houses to do a better job handling the fish to ensure all parasitic worms are removed before the fish hits the shelves.

He described it as a rare incident.

He said it is almost impossible to detect worms because when the fish is brought in it is in ice packs and the worms only start moving when the shipment thaws.

The federal consumer and corporate affairs ministry also is looking into the situation.

But that's of little solace to Jaro Svitorka of 2100 Richmond. As far as he is concerned, if he never sees another fish again it will be too soon.

Svitorka said he bought a package of cod fillets at the Safeway store at Foul Bay Road and Fort Street on Friday. But when his wife opened the package she looked in horror as she saw strange translucent worms wiggling on the fish's flesh.

Svitorka said he counted three of the creatures, each about two inches long, before he and his wife decided to close the package and think of something else for dinner.

"It was really unpleasant. It's put us off from eating fish ever again."

However, Wayne Holmes, supervisor of federal fisheries inspection on Vancouver Island, said today there is no cause for alarm.

"Worms in fish are a natural occurrence," he said. "Persons should expect that in some products worms are going to be there."

He said his inspection staff monitors the fish packing plants and if more than four worms are found in 15 pounds of fish then the packing plant is supposed to candle the fish — passing it over a light — and extract the nematodes with knives.

"Unfortunately he can't always be there. A lot of product goes through that we never see."

He said the worms pose no health hazard provided the fish is frozen solid or cooked.

He said the worms, called nematodes by scientists, are particularly common in cod, but practically all marine fishes which form a part of the diet of fish-eating mammals are infected.

He said the worms the Svitorkas saw were likely only an intermediary life-form in the development of the nematode which normally reaches its adult stage in mammals.

Fortunately man is not a usual host and is seldom affected if one of the worms is swallowed.

He even suggested cooked worms may be beneficial because they contain more protein than the fish.

Shareholders still carry torch for bankrupt Barcelona firm

TORONTO (CP) — Faithful shareholders of Barcelona Traction, Light and Power Co. Ltd. still go through the motions of an annual meeting.

The company was declared bankrupt in 1948 by a small court in Spain and its assets were ordered sold.

But the annual ritual required to keep the company legally alive was carried out again this week. Directors were elected, auditors reappointed and financial statements presented as required by Canadian law.

Chairman Howard Bachrach offered only faint hopes for the future, quoting an earlier report by the company.

"Although there are no favorable indications whatsoever, one may not altogether exclude all hope that responsible persons in authority may one day recognize that this company and its shareholders should obtain compensation."

The major shareholder, a Belgian company, financed a 25-year legal battle to recover the assets or gain compensation but abandoned the effort in 1974 after spending millions of dollars on legal costs.

Barcelona was formed early this century by S. F. Pearson, a New York engineer who also established Brazilian Traction — now Brascan Ltd. — and Mexican Light and Power Co., taken over by the Mexican government in 1960.

Barcelona was a thriving company when the Spanish civil war broke out in 1936. The forces of fascist Generalissimo Francisco Franco were financed during the war by Juan March, an entrepreneur who later took over the assets of Barcelona.

Although Barcelona is a Canadian company, it issued bonds payable in British pounds and Spanish pesetas. March was a big buyer of the sterling bonds in the war and post-war years.

However, the Spanish government imposed controls blocking conversion of pesetas into sterling. Unable to obtain funds from its operating subsidiaries in Spain, the company could not pay the interest on the sterling debt.

A court in Reus, west of Barcelona, declared the company bankrupt. The assets were auctioned, with the March interests the only bidder.

Replacement costs of the assets has been estimated at more than $200 million or $100 a share.

Crown Z Stores to move

BURNABY (CP) — The head office of Crown Zellerbach Stores, the retail arm of Crown Zellerbach Ltd., will be moved to Calgary before the end of the year, a company spokesman said Monday.

He said the offices are being transferred because the retail company does most of its business in Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Employees at the Burnaby office have been given the option of transferring to Calgary though the company willtry to provide jobs for those who wish to remain, the spokesman said.

LONDON (AP) — Closing gold prices Tuesday, in U.S. dollars an ounce. London- 298.50; Paris- 314.37; Frankfurt- 296.64; Zurich- 296.625; Hong Kong- 293.12.

Alsands okayed

CALGARY (CP) — The provincial Energy Resources Conservation Board has given conditional approval to the $5-billion Alsands project.

In a preliminary decision released today, the board said the oil-sands development would be in the public interest of Alberta and, subject to "certain requirements respecting operational details," would be technically and environmentally acceptable and consistent with principles of resource conservation.

The oil-sands plant would be the largest in Canada and the third such plant in the Fort McMurray area of northeastern Alberta. Great Canadian Oil Sands Ltd. and Syncrude Canada Ltd. already have plants in operation.

The board said any adverse social effects of the proposed development could be largely avoided by constructing a new town to support the plant, and by "concerted action on related issues of concern to the Town of Fort McMurray and other residents of the region."

The board is prepared to grant the application subject to terms that will be set out in a later report and subject to approval of the provincial environment department. Cabinet approval is also necessary.

The board said its preliminary decision is expected to speed development of the project.

The board's decision was based on evidence at public hearings held during the last two months.

The Alsands Project Group, a consortium of nine companies led by Shell Canada Resources Ltd., proposes a plant capable of producing 140,000 barrels a day of synthetic crude oil and liquefied petroleum gases.

The project site is about 65 kilometres north of Fort McMurray.

Bungling robber backed by victim

EDMONTON (CP) — The victim of an inept robbery attempt in Hinton, Alta., last March wrote a letter supporting Anthony Clair's successful appeal in Alberta Supreme Court for a shorter sentence.

The two became good friends after the bungled attempt. Clair had his one-year jail sentence reduced to three months with 15 months probation.

Wearing masks, Clair, 18, of Hinton and an accomplice had tried to rob a service station. Clair started a fight with the station attendant while his accomplice was to have cleaned out the till.

But nothing went according to plans and Clair had to abandon the scuffle.

Mr. Justice A. F. Moir said Clair's accomplice "couldn't even get the money out of the cash register."

It was "a very inept attempt," Moir said.

Defence lawyer W. O. Robson said Clair is an excellent student with no previous criminal record and is well-regarded in the community, 280 kilometres west of Edmonton. RCMP officers handling the case said it would be a shame to put him in jail.

$40 million project

CANMORE, Alta. (CP) — The municipal planning commission has given Ashk Development Corp. Ltd. approval to build a $40-million motor inn and chalet development in this community about 90 kilometres west of Calgary.

The project is to be completed in the spring of 1981.

'Garbage bear' puzzle

WASAGAMING, Man. (CP) — Unusually aggressive black bears in Riding Mountain National Park in Manitoba have park officials puzzled and concerned.

Five "garbage bears" have been killed this year, while at least a dozen incidents involving aggressive bears have been reported, says chief park warden Harry Campbell.

"This year in particular the bears seem to be more aggressive and we can't figure out why," he says. "If someone is on foot and runs into an aggressive bear, then you're in trouble."

Hikers and campers have had tents ripped by bears searching for food, and two wardens on horseback were forced to flee at full speed to escape charging black bears.

Campbell says the bears which charged the wardens had been previously wounded, probably by farmers.

Wardens have tried transporting bears to remote parts of the park, but have found the 1,840-square-kilometre park is not large enough.

No drought action

REGINA (CP) — The Saskatchewan government is not planning any emergency action to deal with near-drought conditions in some areas of the province, Premier Allan Blakeney said.

Blakeney said it is too early to assess the impact of weeks of hot, dry weather in some areas of the province.

Student appeals ruling

WINNIPEG (CP) — Former Winnipeg police constable Susan Irvine is appealing a court ruling that took away her right to attend law school at the expense of the force.

The ruling also reversed a Manitoba Police Commission order that she be reinstated on the force after being fired for refusing to leave school and return to duty.

Company sponsors refugees

CALGARY (CP) — Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. Ltd. will sponsor as many as 20 Vietnamese refugee families for resettlement throughout Alberta, the company said Monday.

A group of volunteers from the company was formed to help the refugees adjust to their new life.

The company said in a news release the federal immigration commission has approved the sponsorship. The first families will be received by the end of August.

Sponsorship involves a commitment of financial support for up to one year and includes provision of shelter, clothing, food and other necessities.

The company would also help the refugees in getting language training, upgrading job skills, finding work and getting medical care.

Senior vice-president Dianne Narvik said the federal immigration and external affairs departments had responded quickly to the company's offer.

"Government officials expressed the hope that our actions might encourage other corporations to consider sponsorships and it is for that reason we are today publicly stating our intentions."

Centre studies biting insects

WINNIPEG (CP) — Preliminary work to establish one of the first centres in Canada for the study of biting flies is under way at the University of Manitoba.

Dr. Mary Chance, who helped initiate the project, said she plans to travel widely to meet people with a special interest in horseflies, deer flies, black flies, biting midges, stable flies, horn flies and mosquitoes.

Dr. Chance said the centre's eventual role will be determined with the help of industrial companies whose employees work out-of-doors, pesticide firms, university researchers, public health groups, farm groups and all levels of government.

She said she hopes the centre will become indispensable to these groups, and that eventually they will pay for its work. The first goal will be to co-ordinate existing research efforts, but Dr. Chance said she hopes in time to offer training in insect survey and control programs.

Dr. Chance said there are 35 or 40 specialists across Canada studying three areas related to biting insects: human health, economic problems, and what she termed the nuisance factor for outdoor recreation.

Surveys by the centre could be useful in fighting diseases carried by biting insects, the most common of which — encephalitis, or sleeping sickness — is transmitted by mosquitoes.

PARKS DEPARTMENT
"USE OF PESTICIDES"

Extreme care must be exercised if you are using garden pesticides. These chemicals are highly toxic and the following precautions are recommended by the Department of Agriculture booklet "Pest Control for the Home and Garden" — 1979 edition.

1. Before opening the container, READ THE LABEL. Read it all, even the small print. Use only the pesticide that is recommended for the problem.
2. Measure the dosage exactly. Do not use a little extra "for good measure."
3. If dusts or sprays are spilled on skin or clothing, remove clothing immediately and wash contaminated skin with warm, soapy water. Clothing must be thoroughly cleaned before it is reused.
4. Cover feed and water containers when treating around livestock or pets. Do not contaminate fish ponds or waterways.
5. Take care that poison baits do not accidentally poison children or pets.
6. Avoid inhaling sprays or dusts. Always wear protective clothing and mask when the label calls for them.
7. Never smoke while spraying or dusting.
8. After applying pesticides, clean the equipment thoroughly. Clean and store your clothing and protective equipment.
9. Observe the required waiting period before harvesting of sprayed fruit or vegetables.

It is also suggested that:

. Mixing of chemicals should be done at arms length to avoid inhaling fumes or splashback.
2. Never spray during windy or wet weather.
3. Allow spray material to dry out before allowing children or pets on the area.

No substitute for nitrates yet but you can curb your intake

Dr. Johanna Dwyer

Imagine a hot, thick sandwich made of fresh rye bread, filled with appetizingly juicy pink corned beef. Imagine that same sandwich made from dull, grey boiled beef.

Think of weiners that spoil in two or three days in this time of penny-pinching food budgets. Think of restaurants famous for their smoked meats closing their doors.

What could cause the color to change, the meat to spoil and the restaurants to close? Removal of nitrites from cured meats.

Curing meats began years ago when fresh meat wasn't readily available. The nitrites used in curing gave the chracteristic color and flavor to cured meats. As well, curing offers two other benefits. It helps prevent the growth of a bacteria, clostridium botulinum, the cause of the most dangerous and deadly type of food poisoning, botulism. The growth of other bacteria is also decreased and the food doesn't spoil as quickly when nitrites are added.

According to one estimate, about eight hundred million pounds of meat would likely spoil and no longer be available to the Canadian consumer if nitrites were not used. This decreased meat supply would cause a further increase in the already skyrocketing price of most meats.

If curing has so many advantages, why is there increasing concern about the use of nitrites in foods? Quite simply, use of nitrites in foods has been linked to cancer.

Under certain conditions, nitrites combine with other substances, known as amines, which are found in food, tobacco smoke and produced naturally in our bodies. The result of this combination is nitrosamines and that's when the problems begin.

Feeding nitrosamines and nitrites to laboratory animals causes malignant tumors or cancer. But we must point out that the amounts of these substances in foods are much lower than the amounts which cause tumors in animals.

There is no definite proof that nitrites can cause cancer in humans. However, there has been increasing pressure on government to ban the use of nitrites. The United States is presently considering a plan to phase out the use of nitrites as soon as comparable preservatives become available. But no one knows when that will happen.

Canada is also looking at possibilities in this area — seven hundred possible preservatives have been tested and none of them has been found to be a suitable substitute.

In the U.S.recently, bacon was tested where sorbate was added as a nitrite substitute. This caused sore throats and other severe allergy problems. So it was back to the drawing board.

Even if nitrites are banned as food additives, there will still be some in the food supply. Spinach, beets, lettuce, celery, carrots, eggplant and radishes, all naturally contain nitrites, but these foods also contain many important nutrients so we certainly don't recommend that you stop eating them because of the nitrites.

Also, our own bodies produce nitrites. It has been estimated that we get four times more nitrites from our own saliva than we do from our food!

We think that the benefits of nitrites outweigh their potential harmful effect. Maybe you're not convinced and want to decrease your intake of nitrites until the final word is in. You can do so without affecting your nutrient intake a great deal.

Simply use fresh or frozen meats, fish and poultry that hasn't been smoked or cured. Avoid products such as smoked meats.

Beef Stroganoff with pimento sauce

Lots of cream makes this stroganoff count

The lavish use of smetana (sour cream) is quite common in Russian dishes — including its use in this aristocratic dish named for the 19th century diplomat, Count Stroganoff.

BEEF STROGANOFF WITH PIMENTO RICE

- 1½ pounds boneless chuck roast, cut in thin, narrow stips
- 2 tablespoons shortening or oil
- 2 small bay leaves
- 2 cloves garlic, crushed
- 3 cups beef broth
- 1½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 2½ cups chopped onions
- ⅓ cup flour
- ½ cup sherry, optional
- ½ cup sour cream
- ½ cup chopped green pepper
- 1 tablespoon butter or margarine
- 3 cups cooked rice
- ¼ cup diced pimentos

Cook meat in shortening until brown. Add bay leaves, garlic and 2 cups of broth. Cover; simmer one hour or until tender. Add seasonings and 2 cups onions. Mix a little broth into the flour and blend to a smooth paste. Add rest of broth and wine. Stir into meat mixture. Cook about 10 minutes longer. Remove from heat; discard bay leaves. Stir in sour cream.

Meanwhile, saute green pepper and remaining onions in butter until tender. Stir in rice; season with additional salt and pepper. Heat thoroughly. Add pimentos; fluff lightly with a fork. Serve over pimento rice.

Makes six servings.

Toasted mushroom roll-ups

- 2 cups finely chopped mushrooms (not packed)
- 2 tbsp. butter
- 1 tbsp. lemon juice
- 2 tbsp. finely chopped green onions
- salt (to taste)
- dash each of MSG and pepper
- ¼ tsp. curry powder (optional)
- approx. 12 slices white bread (crusts removed; flattened with rolling pin)
- extra softened butter

In skillet, place prepared mushrooms, 2 tbsp. butter, lemon juice, green onions, salt, MSG, pepper, and curry powder. Cook, stirring frequently until mushrooms are just tender (several minutes). Remove from heat (there will be a small amount of liquid in skillet). Prepare bread slices; butter with softened butter; spread with mushroom mixture (approx. 1 tbsp. per bread slice).

Roll up each bread slice in jelly-roll fashion. Spread outside of roll-ups with softened butter. Place on cookie sheet, seam side down. Bake in 425° F. oven for approx. 10 minutes (or until golden brown) turning roll-ups half way through cooking process to brown evenly. To serve, cut roll-ups in half crosswise; serve immediately. NOTE: Appetizers can be made up in advance and refrigerated until ready to bake.

Here are some shortcuts to delicious lamb chops

the 60-minute gourmet

A short while back, at a reader's request, I outlined the simplest method of seasoning and cooking a fish and at the same time making it appealing. More and more in this day and age, people are learning that some of the simplest dishes have a grand and justifiable appeal.

Here are two of the quickest and simplest methods for cooking lamb chops. In one, the chops are cooked under a broiler flame, and in the other, they are "pan-broiled," or cooked in a skillet.

Should you choose to cook lamb chops under the broiler of your home stove, the cooking time will depend primarily on two things. The first is how hot the source of heat is. That temperature will vary with the stove, even when the heat is at its highest setting. The second thing is how close the meat is placed to the source of heat.

If you want the meat to be quite rare inside, put the meat quite close to the flame, turning once and browning well but quickly on both sides. The oven door should be left open at all times while broiling. The meat will tend to "steam" if enclosed.

Should you wish to pan-broil your chops, the skillet should be heavy. A black iron skillet is ideal. Do not add any form of fat, but heat the skillet until almost "smoking," or red hot.

Add the chops and cook about three or four minutes to a side; longer if you want the meat well done. Set the lamb chops on their edges, fat side down, and cook until nicely browned. Remove the chops, pour off the fat the cooking has produced and add butter to the hot skillet.

When melted, pour this over the chops (you may flavor the butter with a dash of garlic) and sprinkle with parsley.

Cotes d'Agneau Grill (Flamed lamb chops)

- 8 loin lamb chops, each about ½ pound and about 1½ inches thick
- Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste.

1. Preheat the broiler on High.

2. Sprinkle the chops with salt and pepper. Arrange the chops on a baking rack and place under the broiler about five or six inches from the source of heat. Leave the broiler door open. Broil about five minutes on one side and turn.

3. Continue broiling the second side. If you want to speed up cooking for a rarer interior, move the broiling pan closer to the source of heat, about three inches away. Cook about three minutes. If you want a medium or well-done interior, leave the broiler in its original position and broil about 5 to 10 minutes.

Yields four servings.

Cotes d'Agneau Poelees (Pan-broiled lamb chops)

- 8 loin lamb chops, each about ½ pound and about 1½ inches thick
- Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
- 4 tablespoons butter
- 1 teaspoon finely chopped garlic
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley.

1. Sprinkle the chops with salt and pepper on all sides.

2. Use one or two such heavy skillets as the black iron ones, large enough to hold the chops in one layer.

3. Heat the skillet until almost smoking. Do not add any oil or other fat. Add the chops and cook on one side about four minutes until well browned. The chops should be cooked at all times over moderately high heat. Turn the chops and pour off the resultant fat from the skillet or skillets.

4. Continue cooking the chops on the second side, about three minutes.

5. Set the lamb chops up on their edges to cook the rim of fat. It may be necessary to let them rest against the sides of the skillet to keep them upright. Let cook about two minutes and return them to the second side and continue cooking about one minute.

6. Remove the chops to a warm platter and discard the fat in the skillet. Add the butter to the skillet and when it is hot, add the garlic. Cook briefly and pour over the chops. Serve sprinkled with chopped parsley.

Yields four servings.

Broiled Tomatoes With Oregano

- 2 large red, ripe tomatoes
- 5 teaspoons peanut, vegetable or corn oil
- 4 teaspoons dried oregano
- Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste.

1. Preheat the broiler.

2. Core the tomatoes and slice them in half.

3. Grease a baking pan, large enough to hold the tomato halves, with one teaspoon of oil. Arrange the halves over it, cut side up.

4. Sprinkle each half with one-half teaspoon oregano, salt and pepper. Sprinkle one teaspoon oil over each half and place the tomatoes under the broiler. Broil about five minutes.

Yields four servings.

Stretching meatloaf

Make the most of your meat money: To stretch a meatloaf into more servings, stuff it with your favorite stuffing. To tenderize boiling beef, add a little vinegar or use part tomato juice as the cooking liquid. For an inexpensive marinade to tenderize round or chuck steaks, stir up vegetable oil and vinegar mixture — about half and half.

OPEC 'not cause' of oil squeeze

By ROSS EVANS
Washington Star

WASHINGTON — The OPEC oil cartel is not the cause of today's high oil prices, and world prices could be even higher in a free market, outgoing U.S. Energy Secretary James Schlesinger says.

"If anything at the present time, a strictly free market for oil might raise rather than lower the price of oil," Schlesinger told the Senate Finance Committee Tuesday.

Schlesinger voiced the assessment while testifying for President Jimmy Carter's proposed windfall profits tax.

In the face of the committee's obvious sentiment for earmarking some of the tax revenues for its own purposes, Schlesinger indicated that there may be some flexibility in the administration's position.

Some exceptions to the tax should be considered, Schlesinger said — in contrast to Carter's strong stand last week against such modifications.

There could be more revenue available — and less need to spend it on synthetic fuel subsidies as Carter has proposed — if world oil prices go up faster than the administration has assumed, Schlesinger said.

That assumption — that the Organizaton of Petroleum Exporting Countries will not increase its prices faster than general inflation — is both "tenuous" and "conservative," Schlesinger said. He predicted a faster price increase.

Underlining that prediction, Schlesinger said there are basic economic forces, not just OPEC actions, behind the cartel's increasing prices.

"The relevancy" of popular notion that the world oil price is high only because of OPEC "disappeared once demand overtook supply," Schlesinger said.

"The excess capacity that two years ago might have driven prices down is no longer there," he said.

Reflecting the possibility that the tax pie to be divided could be bigger than the $142 billion administration estimate, Schlesinger agreed that some exceptions to the domestic windfall tax should be considered.

When Sen. David Boren, Dem-Okla., asked Schlesinger why some oil production in expensive locations should not be exempt from an estimated $6.8 billion tax, Schlesinger responded that Boren's point was "well taken, and I think we should address those issues."

Foe claims shah faces 'Red Army' hit squad

F-14 buy-back bid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is trying to buy back 78 sophisticated F-14 fighter planes from Iran, the state department announced Tuesday.

The effort to retrieve the sophisticated aircraft is prompted partly by fear the U.S.-made planes will fall into Soviet hands.

"We have been discussing with the Iranian government the possibility of our buying back the F-14s . . . but there has been no final resolution yet," a state department spokesman said.

The F-14s originally cost about $25 million each but the U.S. has told Iran it will not pay that much for the used planes, The Washington Post reported in today's editions.

TEHRAN (AP) — An Iranian religious leader who claims he is masterminding a plot to kill deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, said today that a "Red Army" similar to the Japanese terrorist organization has been formed to assassinate the shah.

Ayatollah Sadeq Khalkali said the shah, close members of the monarch's family and former aides have been sentenced to death in absentia by a revolutionary court.

However, there has been no other indication that such a trial took place, and Iranian Foreign Minister Ibrahim Yazdi has said official government policy is not to assassinate the shah, but to bring him back to Iran for trial.

Last month, after the shah arrived at his home-in-exile in Cuernavaca, Mexico, Khalkhali claimed revolutionary commandos tried twice to kill him, but Mexican authorities and spokesmen for the shah said the claims were false.

Blackjack dealing a little rusty? Nevado college teaches it

RENO, Nev. (AP) — The art of dealing cards for blackjack involves more than tossing out cards and being able to count to 21.

In fact, it's taken seriously enough to be offered as a college course at one school here.

Western Nevada Community College is the only college or university in this gambling state — or the country — that teaches a person how to deal blackjack.

Students learn how to deal the card game in a regular classroom at the college. But instead of desks, students sit at blackjack tables.

The three-credit class costs $75 for 60 hours of instruction. The credits can be applied toward an associate degree at the college.

Dealing blackjack professionally requires special training to learn techniques, terminology and smoothness. Most casinos do not allow persons to deal cards without prior instruction or experience. Others prefer to train dealers themselves.

Carolyn Keller, the course's instructor, says the course makes sense since "that's how most persons are making their income around this state." Gambling is Nevada's No. 1 industry.

Keller, a dealer at a downtown casino, has been in the gaming industry for about 27 years. During that time, she has worked as a dealer, pit supervisor and instructor.

The gambling-related curriculum might eventually be extended to other courses, such as roulette and baccarat, but nothing definite has been decided, she says.

The college doesn't guarantee employment when the course is completed, but Keller says several graduates have found dealing jobs.

She adds that some students — many already in other casino employment — sign up for the class just to get a dealing job. Others are earning credits toward a college degree.
